TOLSTOI IS KEPT ALIVE
BY USE OF STIMULANTS

(By United Press.)
St. Petersburg, Nov. 19.—Count Tolstoi is being kept alive by artificial means today and his death seems a question of a few hours. He is too low to take any intelligent interest in church matters, but there is a possibility that the Greek church will withdraw the order which excommunicated him in order to give him orthodox burial. The emperor is using his influence to bring this about.

French Are Blamed
For Starting Riots

(By United Press.)
London, Eng., Nov. 19.—The local newspapers today side with the American sailors in the fight with the French soldiers at Cherbourg, yesterday. They used the exemplary conduct of the sailors while in London as a basis for refuting the French claim that the sailors started the trouble.

Cherbourg say the Americans remained quiet until attacked, notwithstanding the fact they had been robbed. The death of the sailors found in the bay is attributed to dock robbers. That the French soldiers took part in the robbing and rioting, is evident from the discovery of some of the American property among the effects of the French artillery.

ROAD HOUSE BESIEGED
BY ANGRY BROTHER OF
INMATE, 2 WERE SLAIN

(By United Press.)
Mt. Kisco, New York, Nov. 19.—Two men were shot dead and several others were wounded last night in a pitched battle over a young girl, at Dan Merrill's road house, near here. The fight lasted two hours and at its close the sides of the house were riddled with bullets.

Last night the inmates received word that Brower and a party of armed friends were coming. The house was quickly barricaded and the light turned low. In a few hours, Brower arrived and knocked and again demanded his sister. He was answered by a shot and the battle was on.

Merrill's road house is located in an isolated place in West Chester county. Wednesday night Ed Brower of Cappaqua, N. Y., entered the house and demanded that the proprietor release Brower's sister whom he alleged Merrill was holding there against her will. Two men threw him out. He left threatening a return.

It stopped only on the arrival of the sheriff and a posse. The attackers fled and the inmates attempted to escape, but 10 men and women were caught and jailed in White Plains. One of the dead men was identified as a cousin of the proprietor. The other is unknown, and thought to have been a member of the attacking party.

Mexican Frontier
Is Closely Guarded

(By United Press.)
Washington, Nov. 19.—Worried by the possibilities of Mexican revolutionists in Texas taking advantage of the present unrest to raise expeditions to help their compatriots across the border the state department is taking unusual precaution along the frontier. A number of leaders have been arrested at various times to comply with the neutrality laws, and Mexico will not countenance the hatching of conspiracy's on this side of the border.

Osborn Cannot Get
Pay For Services

(By United Press.)
Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(Special to Times.)—In an opinion to the solicitor of Portsmouth, Attorney General Denman holds that a member of council who formerly was attorney for the city, cannot now draw money for his services, though the expenses he was allowed for such service before he became a member of council were properly allowed.

The city owned stock in a corporation and the work was in connection with this. He cannot draw money for anything which the council, of which he is a member, would order paid.

BLAKE.
The member referred to is Geo. M. Osborn and the services rendered, were in connection with the Craig City land company.

ROOSEVELT AT THE CAPITAL
SATURDAY

(By United Press.)
Washington, Nov. 19.—Colonel Roosevelt spent today here visiting and receiving visitors, while he was at the Longworth home a steady stream of callers flowed in and out. He spent some time at the Smithsonian Institute looking over his trophies gathered from his hunt in Africa. He had many comments and suggestions ready about their mounting, etc.

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, Nov. 19.—Col. Roosevelt visited the White House today for the first time since he left it as President in 1909. The former President left a card for Mrs. Taft, who is in New York. Assistant Secretary Foster guided the Colonel through the executive offices. He seemed to enjoy the visit.

BANKER GOES TO THE PEN

(By United Press.)
Medina, O., Nov. 19.—E. F. Shelby, the banker who was convicted of embezzling $16,000 from the estate of an imbecile ward, was today sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for a thirty-day stay for appeal.

Miss Anna Sachs, of West Third street, received word Saturday that her sister, Mrs. Maggie Swander, wife of Frank Swander, a former Portsmouth mill man, is very low at their home in Titusville, Pa.

Baby But In THE TIMES
WEATHER MAN

Being out hunting and meeting the sign "No Hunting Allowed," on the most promising field, makes a fellow feel just like the small boy who gazes at Christmas toys in the show windows, that he has not the money to buy. And the "kind farmer" who takes you by the hand and tells you to sail in and shoot is as scarce as the man who buys the toys to make the largely in the story books. Here's the weather for Sunday: Ohio, Indiana, partly cloudy to night and Sunday. West Virginia, unsettled weather tonight and Sunday.

(By United Press.)

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—With a beautiful Indian Summer day making a mop of the furcoats and rugs which many carried, with autos shooting hither and yon until a crossing cop remarked that one would think they were a pickle apiece, with thousands and thousands of people pouring into this town, with women bedecked in their latest conceptions of fashion and the whole dotted, striped and marked with blue and crimson, even a mummy would know that Yale plays Harvard today.

The ladies oddest conceit this year is a muff of leather, made to resemble a football and decorated with the colors of the team favored by the wearer.

While the crowd gathered the teams themselves were quietly which began at 2 p. m. and every man on each side expected to win.

MISS ELKINS SUBJECT OF NEWSPAPER GOSSIP,
SAID TO BE IN EUROPE

(By Associated Press.)
London, Nov. 19.—Despite the fact that Miss Katherine Elkins has returned to America, some continental papers continue to print stories that she is stopping at Lugano, Switzerland, intimating that the Elkins family with the exception of the Senator recently returned to Europe incognito.

A despatch from Lugano today states Miss Elkins is there arriving with the Bishop of Ticino for her conversion to Catholicism and that she was visited last Monday by the Duke Abruzzi.

Secolo Milan, Italy, says that inquiry at Lugano shows that Miss Elkins is there and the marriage of Miss Elkins to Duke Abruzzi is likely to take place late in December or early in January. It is thought in London that Lugano correspondents have mistaken another party for the Elkins family.

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, Nov. 19.—Senator Elkins brought here recently suffering from a severe illness, was reported today as considerably improved. Mrs. Elkins and Miss Katherine Elkins are in Washington, and expect to remain here until there is a change in the Senator's condition.

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(Special to Times.)—It is reported here that Kent and Bowling Green have been practically decided upon for two new state normal schools by the commission of which L. D. York of Portsmouth is a member. BLAKE.

Harry Carpenter, clerk at the Biggs House, has a severe attack of the grip.

IS BACK HOME FROM CHICAGO

City Auditor, W. N. Gableman, is back from Chicago, where he went to represent the Portsmouth baseball club at the annual meeting of the National Association of professional baseball clubs of the minor leagues and to urge the claims of the local club in the Spencer case before the National Board, the supreme court of baseball.

The association was in session three days and a vast amount of business was transacted. Fifty leagues have membership in the association, embracing 336 cities of America and Canada and controlling every player belonging to all clubs under its protection.

The National board is composed of eight members elected annually from the membership of the organization and they settle all cases of disputes that arise among the minors over the sale, transfer, signing of players and in fact they pass on most all questions and their decision is final.

President Gableman accompanied by President Keck of the Ohio State league and Secretary Bobby Quinn of the Columbus club, to the meeting. On Wednesday morning the evidence and arguments in the Spencer case were presented. While the commission has not rendered a decision, yet the local president while not sure that his club has again lost though he has made up his mind from the evidence and what he heard that the Toledo club will get a favorable verdict.

Among the notables that Mr. Gableman had the pleasure of meeting were President Merritt of Sioux City, whose club is piloted by a Portsmouth product, George "Dart" Andrews, who looked Bill up at the request of his field boss, if for no other reason than to extend regards for "Dart"; President McGill of the Denver club, who predicted a bright future for Barney Schreiber who performed in that city last year and was sold to Cincinnati; President's "Tip" O'Neill, of the Western and Cal Ewing of the Pacific coast leagues and also met and had pleasant chats with Tim Murnan, celebrated baseball writer of Boston, John McGraw, Joe Kelly, Billy Clymer and others.

Great Interest In the New Masonic Degree

Members of Solomon Council, No. 49, Royal and Select Master Masons, are displaying much interest in the conferring of the Super Excellent degree for the first time at Portsmouth, at the close of the Council's regular meeting on next Monday evening. This is an honorary degree which is required by the Grand Councils of some states, but not as yet adopted in the Ohio jurisdiction. Because of its magnificent and historical teachings, it has, however, been adopted by some of the more progressive local Councils of the state, adding much to the beauties of their work.

At former times some fifty or more local Council Masons have taken this degree, either at the State Grand Council, or at Chillicothe, and these companions under direction of John A. Ives, Thrice Illustrious Master of Solomon Council, will nearly all have part in conferring the degree here.

There are over a score of speaking parts, and the work calls for an elaborate investiture of costumes and other accessories. As the principals have been rehearsing their parts for some time, the work is expected to go along smoothly for its initial presentation. For the first time, however, only a small class of those who have already petitioned will be given the degree, the intention being to get it well in hand for a large initiation later in the fall. Upon that occasion, a large class will be given the work and invitations will be extended to Council Masons of surrounding cities to be in attendance, the usual banquet feature being in evidence. Every Council Mason in good standing is eligible.

It is proposed to make the Super Excellent degree a permanent fixture in Portsmouth Masonry, and to have the conferring of the work at stated intervals of the year, to become so event eagerly anticipated by those eligible to receive it in this and surrounding counties.

AN AGED WOMAN DROPPED DEAD

Mrs. Mary Hollingsworth perhaps the oldest and most widely known colored citizen of the city, dropped dead of heart trouble at 11 o'clock Saturday morning at the home of her son, George Hollingsworth of 1518 North Waller street.

She had been afflicted with heart trouble for the past twenty years.

Saturday morning she had helped to do up the work in her room and while going about in the room sank to the floor in the presence of the family and died before any relief could be furnished.

Mrs. Hollingsworth was born at Mt. Airy, North Carolina, over 98 years ago. Her exact age is not known. Her parents through some good luck came into possession of considerable property and purchased their freedom from slavery. She married Starling Hollingsworth then a slave but immediately purchased his freedom.

Shortly after the war in 1866, they moved to Portsmouth where she has ever since resided. Mr. Hollingsworth died in 1870. Two children, George Hollingsworth, with whom she lived, and Mrs. Jennie Bessor of Mt. Airy, North Carolina, survive.

The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house and will be conducted by Rev. Haley. The remains will be interred at Greenlawn.

LIZZY WANTED LAW ON HER HUSBAND

Lizzie Collins, the young 20-year-old wife of Charley Collins, was before Squire Byron Saturday morning to institute a case of neglect against her husband. She wanted her husband to "come across" with a sufficient sum to support their three-year-old child. The Collins woman sells second-hand clothes for a living, and lives at the corner of Front and North Waller streets. She claimed that her husband has done nothing toward the support of herself or child. Just as her story was getting interesting, Charley Collins walked into court and made the promise that he would deposit $2 per week toward taking care of the child. Then the case was dropped.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early age, these remedial necessities, remedies are needed to aid nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, prepared from natural roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Bloating of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other intestinal derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a second position as a substitute for this one—holistic medicine of known composition, not even though the agent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, they granulate, easy to take as candy.

Al Bridwell got his 1911 contract from the New York Giants, Saturday. It called for a handsome increase in salary and Briddy at once signed it up and mailed it back to New York.

Close Deal In Real Estate

Merle O. Dudit and F. H. Fritts engineered a deal in real estate Saturday whereby property of Miss Elsie Boynton and Miss Dora Hard was exchanged for property belonging to W. B. Grice. The Boynton property on Sinton street was exchanged for a cottage on East Eighth street.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early age, these remedial necessities, remedies are needed to aid nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, prepared from natural roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Bloating of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other intestinal derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a second position as a substitute for this one—holistic medicine of known composition, not even though the agent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, they granulate, easy to take as candy.

Electric Line Gets An Extension Of Its County Franchises

Gallipolis, O., Nov. 19.—A. E. Cox, president of the Cincinnati and Pittsburgh Electric Railway Co., was here last week and secured from the county commissioners an extension of their franchise until April 1, 1911.

This company is composed principally of Huntington men and is now trying to float an issue of $12,500,000 worth of 6 per cent gold bonds, the proceeds of which will be used in building the line. They have assurances from financial interests that the bonds will be underwritten in the near future and expect to commence actual work some time after the first of the year.

The road will be built on the north side of the Ohio river all the way from Cincinnati to Pittsburgh, using the present electric systems at Cincinnati, Ironton, Portsmouth, Gallipolis, Pomeroy and other points. These lines will be either purchased outright or leased.

The number of people on both sides of the river in the territory traversed by the proposed road number 2,326,417, including the cities of Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. This does not include, however, many thousands who live near enough the line to use it frequently.

Aged Man Is Dead

Ironton, O., Nov. 19.—At Chesapeake, Lawrence county occurred the funeral of John Newman, who was one of the oldest citizens of Lawrence county, and one of the native settlers of the eastern section of the county.

Mr. Newman, who was 92 at the time of his death, was a G. A. R. veteran, and with a son afforded one of the comparatively few instances of father and son going into the struggle of the civil war side by side.

Mr. Newman was the father of five generations, and a recent photograph shows himself, his wife and their descendants, down to the fifth generation. He was distantly related to the Newman family found in Lawrence, Scioto and Gallia counties, and in Wayne and Cabell counties, W. Va.

Judgment Secured

George H. Watkins, through attorneys Holcomb and Millar, took judgment against John Pont on two cognovit notes of $60.00 each in common pleas court Saturday morning. The notes were dated at Wakefield, O., Sept. 29, 1906, and the accumulated interest brings the amount up to $149.00. Attorney R. C. Myers confessed judgment on behalf of Mr. Pont.

A Bright Girl Is Dead At Fullerton

Nellie, the 16-months-old daughter of Bural Timberlake, of Fullerton, died Friday night at 11 o'clock after an illness of five weeks with typhoid pneumonia. Three other members of the family are down with the same malady, the condition of Walter, aged 12 years, being serious at the present time. The funeral will be held from Bennett's chapel Sunday at 2 o'clock. Interment in the cemetery nearby.

Mrs. Timberlake, mother of the stricken family, is a sister of Mrs. Sigmond Burkhardt, of Offshore street.

R. O. Brady, of Summit street, and Louis Hickson, of Eleventh street, returned from a hunting trip at Oak Hill, with forty-nine rabbits and a number of birds.

Diamonds For Christmas

Gifts for Christmas should be touched by the dignity of beauty or of use. The Diamond combines both these qualities. Its decorative quality is too highly appreciated to need comment. Its usefulness lies in the fact that investment in a Diamond is like a savings bank, provided the quality is right. Your dealer should be as carefully selected as your banker.

We have established a life long reputation for reliability. Our diamonds are purchased direct from dependable cutters, and carefully graded. We allow no poorly cut nor badly colored stones in our stock, because a good stone, always commands its price, while disposing of a poor diamond is always questionable.

There are some crisp, new designs in single stone, two stone and cluster settings to be seen at our jewelry store.

THE PRESENT DUTY.

The insurance companies say Akron, Portsmouth and Jackson are the three towns in the state most illly provided to fight fires. That means they have to pay the highest insurance rates.

Attention is particularly called to the fact, that though she has made great advance in growth in other directions, Portsmouth has not in many years added anything to her fire fighting equipment. This is true, if we except the fact that she installed at least one new engine, replacing an old one. However, the city is moving in this direction. She has built a new fire department, will have it organized in a few days and, unless there is further aggravating delay, which her authorities have heretofore not been able to prevent, she will, before the end of this month, have a complement of the most modern fire-fighting apparatus to be found anywhere. Then we shall see what we shall see, whether or not the insurance companies will take as deep note of this improvement in equipment as they have of the lack of it and act accordingly.

This leads us back to an idea often advanced in these columns and that is, that though the city has made notable progress in so many other directions within a few years past, absolutely nothing, beyond the purchase of this new equipment, has been done to protect her against disastrous conflagration. Few other towns are so imminently menaced from this source as she and certainly none other has such reason to adopt precaution against the widening of the peril. The law gives council the right to say what sort of buildings should be erected within defined sections and resort should be had to that law so the peril of fire may at least be made no greater than it is now.

EARLY SHOPPING.

It is rather a throat-worn injunction, but still it is timely and wise for all that—do your Christmas shopping early, the earlier the better. We are not advising anyone to rush off at this very moment and make purchase of the presents she intends making, but it would be a wholesome idea to keep the thought that they are to be made in mind. Bearing the thought constantly with you when you enter store or shop you can make a more leisurely and better choice and not be compelled at the last moment to rush in and buy things that are unsatisfactory to you and which you will feel are unwelcome to the relative or friend who receives them. The other view is that you will be doing your part in a charitable consideration that will relieve salespeople of the worry and strain, which over presents to them during the holiday buying season.

A QUIETUS.

The great temperance wave which was overwhelming the country for the past three years has been checked and the tide turned the other way. Sharon is the point where the dries were met, conquered and overwhelmed. Sharon, which for better than a generation has been as arid as the Sahara desert of any moisture that either refreshed or irritated, Sharon where every man kept watch upon the other, that none might proclaim local option was a failure, has tired of teetotalism and embraced, or rather offered herself to the embrace of the Demon Rum. But, perhaps, you have never before heard of Sharon and in that you are not much to blame for your ignorance. Sharon is an ancient and honorable town in the godlike state of New Hampshire, that is on that dark day of November 8th last when she gave a most devilish majority to the Democratic candidate for governor, whom the almighty Teddy—up to that date—had declared a most undesirable citizen. Sharon, shameless in her shame, gave a 100 per cent majority to the wets, so overwhelming that the meagre minority dare not lift its voice in cry of fraud, or reproval. The issue was fought and waged with unexampled fury and every vote was out. There is no charge of colonizing, fraud, or miscount. Every man knows all was fair and square. The total was four votes wets and two dry. The election officers comprised four judges and two clerks, comprising the entire adult male population of the town, so there was no possible opening for any sneak work with the ballots. And such is Sharon and such is the rule of the American sovereign.

THE OTHER SIDE.

The late candidate Harding, gives evidence through his paper, that he is convicted Ohio, as the result of the election of November 8th, is to have a "wet" administration, and the prospect seems to trouble him sorely.

As he knows so well the future he must be at least equally well versed in the past. That being the case we would like for him through his personal medium of publicity to tell a public, which lately was more or less interested in him, to tell us exactly what he meant by his home rule speeches in Cincinnati at the heel of his campaign and just how much basis of fact there was in the cartoon, paid for by the Cox gang, in the Cincinnati Enquirer of November 6th in which he was represented as the clamorous friend of "personal liberty" and Judson Harmon as rather dubious of the ogre. There were some hundreds, yes, some thousands of "drys," who voted against Harding just because of that cartoon and we think he owes it to them to show them where they were right or wrong.

NOT IMPOSSIBLE.

The Columbus Dispatch, seeing Judson Harmon, the next Democratic nominee for president, has another vision in which William R. Hearst appears as the running mate of the Ohioan.

The first is easy enough but Hearst the Democratic vice presidential nominee is certainly a dream. Yet it is not impossible and stranger things have happened in the politics of this blessed land of ours, for instance Hearst and Teddy Roosevelt becoming political pals. Hearst is a man of tremendous activities. He has revolutionized the newspaper business of the country. Envious contemporaries called his journals "yellow," but they have been forced to print the same sort of paper he makes, as near as they can. Once looked upon as a most dangerous citizen his indomitable energy has won him first place in respect as the champion of the people and the unconquerable foe of political and financial bossism, where they are corrupt. We haven't the remotest impression that he will be the vice presidential candidate, but there would be nothing surprising, nothing incongruous in the political game if he were.

THE WRONG SOURCE.

Republican organs, which take anything from Columbus, provided it comes free, have a tale from the Republican bureau that a clean sweep is going to be made of state Republican office holders and that in three months not so much as a janitor, who acknowledges allegiance to the G. O. P., will be left.

That is interesting information but it comes from the wrong source to be altogether accurate. There is no doubt that in branches where the public service will not be injured but probably promoted by a complete change, such as the minor officials in the state house, it will be made as quickly as possible, but state hospitals and corrective institutions will not be either soon nor radically affected. It has been and will, no doubt, continue to be the policy of Governor Harmon to keep these as far unaffected by panic as possible and he will not disturb, nor permit to be disturbed employees who have proven fit for these positions. Treason that dark day of November 8th last when she gave a most devilish majority to the Democratic candidate for governor, whom pat in the position that he wanted the most skilled and efficient service therein and he would not turn them over to those who had to prove their capacity and were but experiments to begin with. This outcry that he now intends doing otherwise is only a squall before anyone is hurt and is made to create prejudice against his administration.

THE OPPORTUNITY.

It rejoices us to see that the Cleveland members of the general assembly have held a caucus and unanimously resolved that one of the things they will strive to bring about will be an investigation into Hamilton county affairs, so buttressed with all the technicalities that not even Boss Cox's courts can throw a monkey wrench into it and stop the machinery.

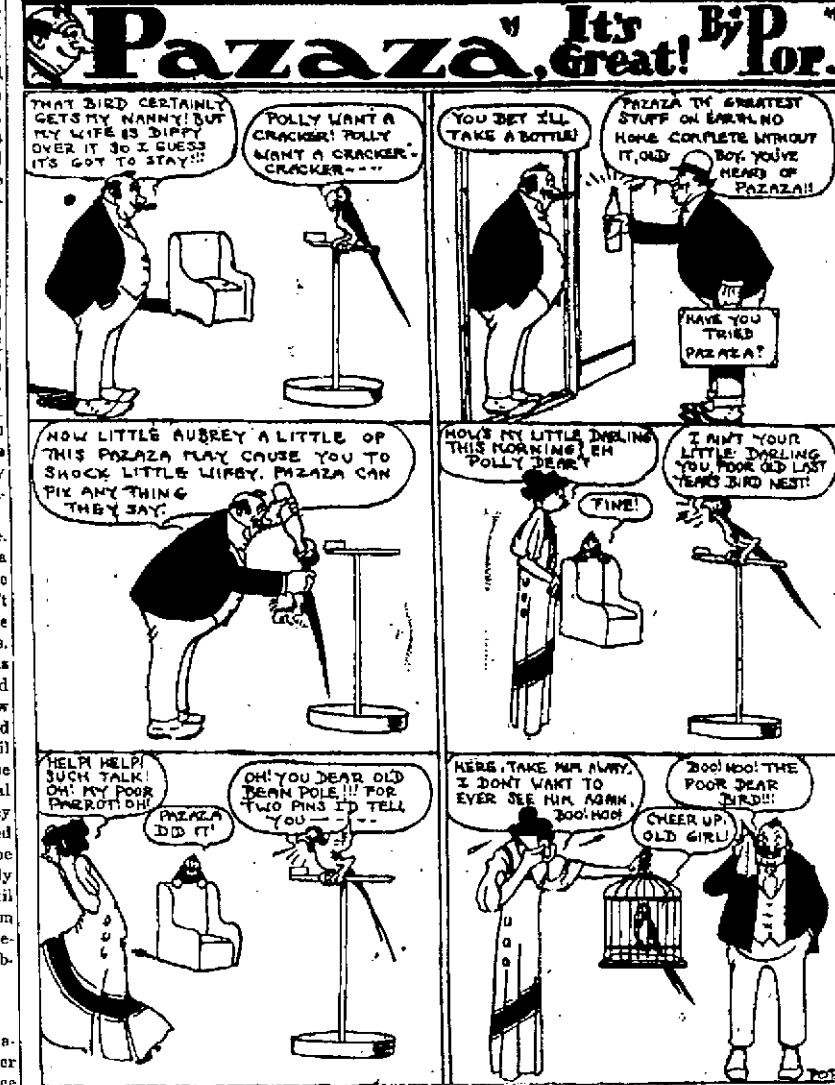

That resolve is the right one. The people know, of course, in a general way that the Cox machine has grafted millions, but that isn't sufficient to move them, as we see by experience with the state. They knew the state house was honey-combed with grafters and leaking with graft, but they knew this only in a general way and were not stirred up over it until Governor Harmon brought out the particular grafters and the actual forms of grafting. Then they arose in their might and smashed things. Cincinnati will never be anything but the most rottenly governed city in the country until her citizens have set before them the actual circumstances and detail of how they have been robbed.

OF DOUBTFUL MERIT.

A movement promises to be a foot to place all positions under state officers under civil service rules. That would mean, should it become the law, that no incumbent could be removed except for proven inefficiency or dishonesty. Such a rule would be of doubtful expediency and it can be seen where it might result in serious injury to the commonwealth. Take conditions, for instance, as they have been known to have prevailed in Ohio for several years prior to the inauguration of Governor Harmon. Grafting in many of the departments was a certain fact. It was impossible, however, to convince the voters of that fact until it was established as a legal proposition. Subordinates in office were aware of the deplorable condition, yet they never "cheeped" about them and it is surely that had there been merely change in the heads of departments grafting would have never been revealed. No head of department, having his own resources to depend upon could have in the sort period of his incumbency prided upon the lid and revealed the mass of corruption which lay below. To illustrate, just before Treasurer Creamer took office effort was made to hide all evidence of the grafting in the conduct of his office by removing all the correspondence and records thereof. It must be that when the legislature was investigating Creamer's predecessor this evidence, through the connivance of minor officials, was withheld from the committee, otherwise would it have come to light. As it actually occurred, however, the removal of incriminating documents just before Creamer came in was not complete and what were left behind showed the generally corrupt conduct of the office. Had the subordinates under his predecessor McKinnon remained there would have been no prying eye to discover these documents, nor willing hand to pass them over to Creamer. A scramble for office is not one of the seemly results of an election that changes the political complexion of the state, but in trying to provide against this we may make a worse condition. So the would-be reformer had best consider the ultimate result of civil service before endeavoring to force it adoption.

-Brightside and His Boy-

"Picking Our Ellis Island Citizens," Their Latest Tabloid Sketch.

Copyright, 1910, by the New York Evening Telegram, (N. Y. Herald Company). All rights reserved.
 BY LAFAYETTE PARKS.

"I see that the President went over to Ellis Island the other day to watch the immigrants come-in," observes Brightside to his owl-like offspring.

"Maybe he was looking for a good chance to grab off a cook for the White House before she got into the clutches of the employment agencies," guesses Son.

"He wanted to see for himself what class of men and women are flocking here from the lands across the sea," continues Father. "The authorities tried to prevent a man from entering because he had flat feet, but Taft put his foot down sharply on that kind of discrimination."

"A case of coming out flat-footed on the proposition," sniffs Son. "I don't see why a guy with that brand of hoof can't make just as good a citizen as the mutt with an ingrowing toenail."

"I presume the officials made their ruling on the ground of physical disability," explains Father. "They try to carry out the immigration laws as carefully as possible."

"I didn't know a chap had to own an instep like a Broadway chorus girl wearing French heels as high as a pair of aunts in order to pass a government examination," says Son. "They've got enough red tape down there at Ellis Island to lassoo almost any style of beauty that ever came over the pond if they want to get fuzzy. Some of those eagle-eyed inspectors would find fault with Apollo Belvedere if he happened to comb his hair on the off side of his marble brow."

"To make our American citizenship of the highest type," declares Father, "the gates of our country need to be guarded to eliminate undesirable."

"At that a bunch of 'em must be sneaked in," asserts Son. "If we can believe the dogs handed out by Terrible Toddy, the Pooh Bah of Oyster Bay. To hear him sputter, the words are full of undesirable citizens."

"I understand that the President gave instructions that more discretion be used in the future," Father hopefully offers. "He said the United States needs as many healthy, strong workmen as it can get."

"Now that Pauline Wayne, the now White House cow, is on the job," suggests Son. "Billy Taft knows it's no cinch to be without a hired man to do the chores. In milking one of those highbrow cows with a nervous temperament the boy with flat feet has a big advantage. When Bossie decides it's time to kick over the milk pail a bit of slapstick work with the No. 11 brogan is a great soothe."

"The President mentioned, incidentally, while on this visit," recalls Brightside, "that immigrants are especially needed on the farm."

"Bill is right," approves Son. "If I were an Ellis Island inspector I'd pass along a good husky chap even if he had a wooden leg. Next to a large, flat foot, or a one-legged milking stool, I can't think of anything handier for a hired man to have down on the old farm."

THE BOY WITH THE FLAT FOOT HAS A BIG ADVANTAGE.

That's a good place, too, for the Big Stick, because there is usually an ambitious mule, a fractious cow or a fresh shoot that needs beating up."

"In permitting immigrants to enter America," Father further remarks, "it must also be considered that they will eventually take part in governing our country."

"Don't worry about that, Pop," admonishes Son. "The boys on the job of picking hand-made citizens can see at least two votes in every Guinea they slip the papers to. Just leave it to them to try to plant a bunch of Wops in a district where they will do the most good."

"And of course," remarks Father, "there are the women immigrants."

"No matter what country the dames hail from," asserts Son. "they are usually able to get by the yap wearing the blue suit and the brass buttons. A bright smile frequently hides a pair of pigeon toes."

"It is a grave responsibility to permit young women immigrants to land here," avers Father, "as many of them will become the wives of our American youths."

"At that," ruminates Son, "I'd rather be the guy that says 'Welcome to our city, little one,' than the one who takes out the marriage papers and agrees to pay rent for a flat the rest of his days."

Write Up Of The Election
 This week's issue of the Liberal Advocate gives quite an extensive review of the recent election result in Scioto county. One of the articles detailing the warm campaign was contributed by Sherman Miller.

Inlooker

It's about time to strike out.

A Tacoma, Wash., girl wants 10,000 men to contribute $1 each in a blind pool and draw for the privilege of wedding her. Knew they raised the biggest apples out there, but didn't understand their peaches came as high as that.

The Hudson Tunnel tube in New York square is admitted by all storekeepers in the vicinity to be "the biggest opening we ever had."

Now that the Democrats own the earth and the fullness thereof, what will they do with it?

Has anybody here seen Teddy?

Last bowl from behind the slamming door at Sagamore Hill was had just hurried in would fight again. That's what they all say. Present holder of the title won't have to defend it for two years anyway.

In the light of recent events it would seem fit and proper to hear a few words from Mr. "Jake" Riis, the best citizen of Richmond Hill; Marshal Abernethy, the wolf slayer, and the Rough Riders touching the advisability of convening a lodge of sorrow.

Looking over the list of winter amusements it occurs that a noted Oyster Bay resident might be open to enter the continuous with a war dance sketch.

Oh, it's a business age, beyond all doubt, when the Cleveland county morgue keeper is arrested for disposing of the clothing of an occupant to a second hand dealer.

In addition to the high cost of living, it's a little discouraging to learn that 1,000 cases of rotten eggs are sold here daily and that of 200 cases of tomato paste confiscated Wednesday, an expert reported: "I find that in the two hundred cases there are 9,071,800,000,000,000 bacteria and 208,837,040,000,000 yeasts and spores," he said, "Treaty good for one day's catch."

 Again she taps and beats—the walls
 Resound with blaring brass and drum,
 The fiddles squeak, the harp thrings thrum,
 The flutes pipe up, the air they rend—Oh!
 Crash! Smash! Bing! Bang! That's a crescendo!

When all is over and in place,
 Each fiddle sleeps within its case
 Each harp is safe beneath its hood,
 Each player in a chatty mood;
 The lady leader with her girls,
 Long haired and short, puffs, rats and curls,
 The tall, the short, the stout, the lean,
 Are supping—'tis a pretty scene.

"My work," she says, "is hard, I know,
 But my emotions ebb and flow,
 Daily as my musicians play
 They carry my fatigue away.
 The penitence for all my sins
 Is voiced upon my violins;
 I need no Patis, Sembrichs, Lindas,
 When I can hear the soft wood-winds,

My anger fades in feelings mellow
 Each time I listen to the 'cello.

"No mood has been too sombre yet
 To breathe out on the clarinet,
 The gayest impetus that I feel
 Rings out upon the Clockenspiel;
 And when my heart-strings are in tangle
 I straighten them with the triangle;
 When I feel very temperamental,
 I lead 'em on graziosamente!"

"Men leaders! Pah! I like them not!"

LEGAL NOTICE.

John N. Gunn, of Ripley, Jackson county, W. Va., and Paul J. Gunn, of New York Mills, Minn., will take notice that on the 3d day of August, 1910, Nathaniel I. Seal, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Mary Grant, deceased, filed his petition in the Probate Court of Scioto County, Ohio, being case No. 9511, in said Court, against the above named parties and others, stating that one Mary Grant, late of Scioto County, Ohio, died seized in fee simple of the following described real estate, situate in the County of Scioto, Township of Bloom, and State of Ohio, to-wit:

The southwest quarter of lot Number Forty-nine (49) in the Village of South Webster.

That the amount of debts due from said decedent is $150.00, as near as can be ascertained, and that the charges of the administration of said estate will amount to about $50.00. That the value of the personal estate and effects of said decedent, is nothing, being wholly insufficient to pay the debts and costs aforesaid.

That the said defendants, John N. Gunn and Paul J. Gunn, with defendants, John P. Grant, Mrs. E. R. Hames, Margaret Johnson, Josephine Allen, Lorrana E. Stott, and Sarah F. Parsons, are the only heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent having the next estate of inheritance from Mary Grant, deceased in said real estate.

And prays that he may be authorized and ordered to appraise and sell said real estate according to the statutes in such case made and provided.

Said parties are required to answer on or before the 25th day of December, 1910.

Hansen Has Brilliant Opening

Celebrating the first anniversary of its opening, Saturday afternoon and evening, the Hansen Furniture company, in its ideal quarters in the Damarin building, corner of Second and Court, is delighting hundreds of visitors with its magnificent display of stock and the unexcelled arrangement thereof. The handsome store rooms present a scene of attractiveness that is truly metropolitan in its character. Its charm lies in the exquisite taste with which everything is set and countless lights and music by Bode's famed orchestra. The exhibit of furniture, suitable to every taste and every want is imposing, but the points that attract and hold attention most are the gem department and the artistically appointed show rooms, from kitchen to parlor. The gem department is a new feature and it bears out its name. In it are beautiful selections of Haviland china, cut glassware and ornamental vases and statuettes, a thousand and one things that will decorate table and mantles.

The store in itself is a dazzling exposition of the progress trade has made in Portsmouth in the past few years and is worth a visit from any woman or man as a proud exponent of that fact alone.

Aged Man Died On Friday Afternoon

Rufus C. Dean, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Scioto county, died at his home in Wheelersburg Friday afternoon.

He was born and reared on the farm located where the N. & W. terminals now stands and first saw the light of day on that spot 85 years ago.

Mr. Dean for years was associated with the late Soerens (Glaze) in boat building on New Orleans and the south and he often told interesting stories of his experiences while flat hunting in the early days. Thirty-five years ago he married the widow of Harvey Patten whose maiden name was Martha Strope. The aged helpmate and one son, Dr. H. C. Dean, dentist of Columbus, survive, besides an only sister, Mrs. Lucy Hall, aged 88, of Huntington, W. Va.

He was a member of the Free Baptist association of strong religious conviction and genial and gentle in character.

The funeral will be held from the Wheelersburg Baptist church Sunday at 2 o'clock. Rev. A. C. Cuth will conduct the services.

HOFFER CASE IS AGAIN IN COURT

The Hoffer case has again sprung up in common pleas court. On October 8, Attorney N. W. Evans, representing Mrs. Hoffer, in a suit for alimony, filed a motion and affidavit swearing Judge Blair off the bench by reason of prejudice.

At the meeting of the common pleas judges in Columbus a short time ago the matter was presented to the presiding judge who refused to countenance the affidavit. Judge Blair however suggested that all three judges of this sub-division, W. H. Middleton, E. C. Corn and himself hear the case jointly but this was not exactly agreed to by the presiding judge. The whole matter was thus left as at the beginning.

On Saturday a new point was sprung by Attorneys Bannon and Bannon representing Mr. Hoffer when they filed a motion that the affidavit be dismissed on the grounds that it is improper and impertinent. Also that the case in question was finally submitted to the court on June 14, and any opinion which the court may have expressed on its merits was after the final submission of the case on June 14 and was wholly in place.

Brady, John Wurster, Frank Rudy, O. H. Dickey, C. B. Taylor and Miss Wilhelm.

Mrs. H. T. Bannan will be host at the next meeting of the Friday Bridge, which met Friday afternoon with Mrs. J. W. Bannan, in regular session.

Mrs. George Fuller, of Highland avenue, has as a guest Mrs. Rebecca Graff, of Ironton, who arrived Saturday.

Mrs. M. H. Longfellow entertained the Saturday Whist Friday afternoon in regular session, with Mrs. Finis P. Ernest, of Manitou, Colo., and Miss Hippo Watkins, of Los Angeles, Cal., as special guests. A hot two-course lunch was served by the hostess, one of the most clever culinary artists among the city's young housekeepers. The place for the next meeting was not decided.

Miss Mary McMakin entertained the T. C. C.'s Friday evening in regular session, with prize winners and favors as follows: Miss Isabel Collins, a hand-painted plate; Miss Doris Quastel, a potted fern. Ice cream and cake followed cards and preceded adjournment, to meet with Miss Anna Augustus, December 2d.

The Hamilton Whist will meet Monday instead of Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Jessie Bailey, of Glover street.

Mrs. C. N. Smith's class will give a Japanese party next Monday evening at the home of Miss Fern Purtee, of East Seventh street.

Miss Clara Raugh will spend Sunday at Wheelersburg.

The German M. E. choir will hold a sale of homemade cakes, bread and "Kuchen" next Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock, at Marting's store, Chillicothe street.

Miss Margaret Patterson entertained the following guests Saturday afternoon as ante-nuptial favor to Miss Margaret Wilhelm, bride-elect of Mr. Campbell Taylor, of Buffalo, N. Y.: Misses Mary Anderson, Elizabeth Watkins, Grace Wendelken, Pauline Wilkins and Misses Elmore and Amelia Wilhelm, sisters of the prospective bride. The occasion was a Kensington followed by a family luncheon and a surprise miscellaneous show.

Handsomeness Velvet Costume

Velvet is the fashionable fabric this season, and delightful and chic are the little coat and skirt costumes developed from this rich stuff. A pretty model, trimmed with cord ornaments and the new tulle band, which is wide and supple, is shown here.

The skirt has the approved "narrow cut" and the little box coat is jaunty and youthful.

The high crowned turban is of satin with a white kid facing and white kid band and bow decoration.

er of lovely gifts to the lovely bride-elect.

Mr. Campbell Taylor, of Buffalo, N. Y., is expected here Sunday to claim as bride, Miss Margaret Wilhelm. Mr. Campbell's brother, Mr. Burr Campbell, of Milwaukee, Wis., is coming to attend the wedding. The ceremony will be said November 22d, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilhelm, of Fifth avenue, who were married just twenty-five years ago Thanksgiving Day.

Tuesday instead of Monday evening, the Portsmouth Reading Club will meet at the home of Dr. and Mrs. George Marshall, of No. 102 East Ninth street, above Waller.

Miss Nana Spencer has returned from a three months' sojourn at Walton, Mass., at the home of Mrs. Emma Barber McFadden, sister of Mrs. Frances McColin, of this city.

Mrs. Joseph Brown will be host at the next meeting of the Kaffee Klatch.

Two notices of parties were badly mixed in Friday's Times, the hinted at engagement of a machinist to a member of a certain club.

Banquets Linemen

In appreciation of their efforts toward hurrying the work on the Eleventh street cable put out of commission by fire, President W. H. Fee of the Home Telephone Company, banqueted a party of linemen, about twenty in all, at the Manhattan restaurant, Friday evening.

Mr. Fee's guests were given a fine spread, to which they did ample justice and immensely enjoyed. The work is progressing nicely in installing a new cable in that section of the city, and it is expected that the repairs will be finished by Sunday and service resumed on all lines.

Keep pure the mouth, the gateway of health. Mother, you should realize how unclean teeth destroy your child's health and prospects in life. Teeth not brushed every day decay, become tender, and the child cannot comfortably chew his food. Coarse food will not digest; poor digestion means lack of nourishment to the little body; the blood becomes thin; the constitution weak; the child is an easy victim to disease, suffering the while from the bitter pain of decaying teeth.

For generations children have loved

GOLD WATCH WAS LOST

Martin Conley, a well known farmer residing on McCollough Creek, near Otway, had the misfortune to lose a gold watch somewhere on the Pond Run pike Friday, while he was enroute to town with a load of lumber. Mr. Conley feels the loss keenly, as he prized the timepiece highly, for it was a present from his brother, the late Patrick Conley more as a keepsake than for its intrinsic value, and he will reward the finder liberally for its return.

* * * * * AN AFTERNOON OF MUSIC AND ORATORY AT THE WOMAN'S LITERARY CLUB. * * * * *

Friday afternoon was the first day with their well selected and finely rendered numbers were enjoyed exceedingly. Mrs. Pearce played three difficult numbers with rare taste and skill. Mrs. Marconet assisted Mrs. Draper in accompanying the singers, and also played with her a brilliant arrangement of "Il Trovatore," a sort of echo of the grand opera of Thursday night. The closing number "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by Mrs. Martin and the club in memory of Julia Ward Howe, its author, known in the east as the "Queen of Clubs" and known the world over as poet, reformer and philanthropist.

The "cup that cheers" graciously served, and "piping hot" with delicious wafers, gave the finishing touch to an afternoon which all will love to remember. M. E. D.

Baldheaded Men

Ignorance of the Hair Causes Much Baldness among Men.

Early pety doesn't cause baldness, neither does any kind of pety. Some baldheaded men console themselves with the idea that baldness is caused by a superabundance of gray brain matter, and would have the world believe that a bald head is a sign of great intellect.

Such, however, is not the case. Ninety-nine times in one hundred, baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down deep into the roots of the hair, destroy its vitality and cause it to fall out.

All this may come gradually and take time, but as an up-to-date humorist would say, "what's time to a dandruff germ?"

If you have dandruff, the little invisible, persistent devils called dandruff germs are at work. Destroy them at once, or sooner or later they will cause your hair to fall out and you will be compelled to take your place in the baldheaded class.

In France baldheads are few because men understand how to care for the hair. Parisian Sage is a hair grower and invigorator that is guaranteed by Wurster Bros. to grow hair if the hair root is not already destroyed, to eradicate dandruff, stop itching scalp and falling hair, or money back.

Porch Was Found To Be In Flames

A rear porch at the home of Jos. W. Underwood, an N. & W. engineer, at No. 1216 McConnell avenue, was discovered on fire on Saturday morning at 5 o'clock.

An alarm brought the Hill Top fire company and the blaze was extinguished with slight loss. The porch steps were burned off entirely.

The fire is thought to have been caused by children playing with matches upstairs Friday evening. They set fire to a box of matches but they were thrown outside by Mrs. Underwood in time to prevent a bad blaze. She dashed a bucket of water on the pile and thought she had removed all danger. The burning matches must have smoldered through-out the night however and set fire to the porch. The property is owned by D. L. Webb.

HARMON GETS MANY LETTERS

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—Governor Harmon has received since his re-election over 2000 letters and over 800 telegrams congratulating him on his success. They have been divided between the clerks of the governor and the adjutant general's office for answer. In more than half of them the governor is referred to in connection with the Democratic nomination for president, and they come absolutely from every state in the union, and some are even from foreign lands where friends of the governor are now located.

Are to Attend The Meeting

A letter received at the city building Saturday gave assurance that all of the Water Works Commission members will attend the joint conference with City Council, Monday night. The meeting will be held behind closed doors to enable new members of the Council to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the situation, and later an open meeting will be held, at which any one having suggestions to make regarding the proposed new water supply system will be given a hearing.

It's Olive Tablets for You! Want to Feel Young?

Beware of the habit of constipation. It develops from just a few constipated days, especially in old people, unless you take yourself in hand.

Clear the jaded bowels, muscles back to normal action with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—don't force them to unnatural action with severe medicines or by merely flushing out the intestines with nasty, sickening cathartics.

Such things are merely relief and have nothing to do with the cause of the trouble.

Dr. Edwards discovered the formula for Olive Tablets after working for 17 years among his patients seeking a cure for constipation and torpid liver. These tablets contain olive oil, which is a soothing, healing, natural laxative itself.

Dr. Edwards believes in gentleness, persistence and Nature's assistance.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle yet positive, and they work in such a way that Mother Nature always gladly helps.

There is never any pain or griping when Olive Tablets are used. They are sugar coated, small and pleasant to take.

People by the thousand take one slightly, to prevent constipation, torpid liver, "brown mouth" in the morning, bad breath and that dull, listless feeling.

Try Olive Tablets and be healthy. All druggists sell them in neat, pocket packages—25 tablets for 10c, 50 tablets for 25c.

Pete Brown's Idea Of Macadam Road

Lucasville is indignant over the way in which Commissioner "Pete" Brown is fixing up the village main street, and the Lucasville Gazette sends this note to Peter:

"The county scraper was run over the Chilliopthe pike through town a few times last week, the dust was scraped off, that's about all, then the county roller, passed over the skinned portion a dozen or so of times, which is all that has been done to the roadbed, and they say they are ready for the limestone!"

The roadbed sticks up like the hump on a camel's back! Who ever heard of macadamizing on such a bed!

"To put in macadam the roadbed must be cut down a foot or so more and a good bed made. It cannot be put on the bed as it now is, and a successful job be done. A crushed-stone road can be made on the present bed, but macadam, NEVER!"

"We were promised a macadam road, and that's what we want and expect. We were not promised a crushed-stone road and we do not want one. We want a macadam road and we want it put in right, so that it will stay right."

"Come, Commissioner Brown, forget that limestone until the bed is prepared to receive it. Cut the roadbed down and get a macadam bed, then lay the stone."

Let's see! Didn't Lucasville sort of jolt the gang at the late election?

On account of many of our customers being unable to have work done during the week days we will be open on Sundays during November and December. COME EARLY for your CHRISTMAS PICTURE. We have many new and attractive styles.

TO UNVEIL MONUMENT

New York, Nov. 18.—What promises to be an event of more than ordinary interest to the residents of Washington Heights has been planned to take place next Wednesday afternoon when a monument which has been erected in Fort Washington Park will be formally presented to the city by the Daughters of the American Revolution in commemoration of the 134th anniversary of the capture of Fort Washington and its outposts by the British and Hessian troops, acting in conjunction with the British frigates Phoenix, Rose and Tartar. The ships had succeeded in running by the guns of the redoubt that had been constructed by the Continental troops on the plateau overlooking Jeffrey Hook, now known as Fort Washington Park.

DON'T WORRY CLUB GAVE A FINE DANCE

It was a jolly crowd of over three hundred that attended the fourth annual dance of the "Don't Worry" club at Kendall's Hall, Friday night. The dance committee, composed of Will Frederick, Henry Bassler and Ed Leichner, which had charge of the arrangements spared no means in their effort to make the affair a success and to furnish an evening of keen amusement for the lovers of the dance, and proof that they succeeded, and succeeded well, is the praise received from the guests.

Bode's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion and it is needless to say that their music met with general approval. The dance was not an all night affair, closing at 11:30. Thus three hours of pleasure was afforded and everybody went home before they were tired out. The dances given by the "Don't Worry" club, are very popular and are always looked forward to with interest each year.

Scioto County Man Is Dead At Duluth

Word has just been received here of the death at Duluth, Minn., Monday of Albert Givens, a well known former Scioto county boy, as a result of blood poisoning.

Mr. Givens had had an ulcerated tooth extracted and, after a few days, developed gangrene, at fection of the lungs and sent him here. He was 34 years of age and a son of Crate S. Givens, former Lower Nile township farmer, now also located in Minnesota. The family left here 15 years ago first locating in Iowa. Six years ago Albert settled in Canada but two years later went to Duluth and has since been employed as fireman on one of the big Northwestern railways. He is survived by a wife and two little daughters. Four brothers and three sisters also mourn his death. Mrs. Ira Thompson of New Boston was his eldest sister. Mrs. Lafayette Jones of Grandview avenue was an aunt of the young man and W. A. Givens of McGaw, an uncle. Burial took place at Duluth Wednesday afternoon.

Sanitary sewers which had become clogged up back of the Grimes Hotel and Busy Bee restaurant were cleared by Service Department forces, Saturday.

CUTICURA CURES STAY CURED

First Father is Cured of an Eruption that Burned and Itched Day and Night. Then Baby is Cured of a Distressing Rash.

Neighbors Pleased to Find a Sure Cure for Skin Afflictions.

"I suffered for eight years with what the doctors called the 'seven year itch.' This was like small red pimples such as form on the face but they burned and itched day and night. These pimples were from my saddle up, but mostly on my thighs and arms. I tried doctor after doctor but their medicines brought no relief. But at last I struck the right treatment — CUTICURA. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies — Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Pills — and a few applications brought relief. When I had used about half the set, I was nearly cured and after using two full sets I was well and best of all, I have stayed cured."

"About four years ago, our baby began to be covered with a pink and his head with a spreading sore. Both of the sore, the flesh cracked open and the poor baby would scratch all it had. He wept, cried and could not sleep. Then we bought a set of Cuticura and with a few applications the burning and itching ceased, baby stopped scratching and could sleep. When this little set had gone we had no use for any more as baby was never troubled with the disease again. The neighbors who saw the condition of the baby all asked what cured him and when we told them, they were surprised and pleased to find a cure for these skin afflictions. Edward E. Carter, 224 North Erie St., Chicago, N. J., Mar. 5, 1910."

A whole set of Cuticura Soap and Ointment is often purchased, including its most important ingredient for removal of dandruff and itching. Good throughout the world. Write for a free sample. Send 10c in stamps to J. C. Carter, 224 North Erie St., Chicago, N. J., Mar. 5, 1910.

YALE AND HARVARD

The score in the first quarter was 0 to 0, with the ball in the Yale quarter most of the time.
The Yale team showed surprising strength and speed today and although the ball was in Blue territory most of the first half, the Harvard odds went way down.
At the end of the third quarter the score stood 0 to 0.
The final score was Harvard 0, Yale 0.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:
Yale: L. E. L. D. Smith, Kilpatrick, L. T. Withington, Fuller, L. G. R. O. Fisher, Morris, C. Perkins, McDevitt, R. G. Minot, Paul, R. T. McKay, Brooks, B. E. Lewis, Howe, Q. Wigglesworth, Field, L. H. Wendell, Daly, R. H. Corbett, Kistler, F. B. Leslie.
Harvard won the toss and selected to defend the north goal with the wind at their backs.
Paul kicked off to Harvard's 10-yard line. Lewis returned it 13 yards. The crimson half moved the ball up 30 yards by a sensational run. Leslie kicked behind the goal line and the Blues put the ball in play on Yale's 25-yard line. Felton replaced Wendell.

Daly circles Harvard's right end for five yards, but Yale was penalized 15 yards for holding. Howe punted from behind his goal line to Corbett who fumbled but recovered the ball and was downed by Brooks in midfield. Howe kicked to Corbett who was pulled down in his tracks by Kilpatrick on Harvard's 44-yard line. Corbett went through left tackle for five yards. The quarter ended before the ball could be put into play again.

Second Quarter.
The ball is Harvard's 45-yard line. Yale now has wind at her back. Felton punted to Howe on Yale's 35-yard line and Howe returned the kick on a flashy play. On the next play Yale was penalized 15 yards, it being the Blue's ball on Yale's 40-yard line. Daly circled Harvard's right end for a beautiful 25-yard run. The Yale stands went wild. Wigglesworth, tried a forward pass, which Field captured for Yale in midfield.

It was Yale's ball on Harvard's 50-yard line when the crimson players balked as to the advisability of trying for a field goal. Wendell dropped back for a fake kick and was pulled down by Brooks for a loss. The ball was put in play promptly and Potter worked a forward pass to L. Smith who was downed on Yale's 30-yard line.

With the ball two feet from the side lines, Potter made an on-side kick which was heeled by Field 7 yards from the goal line. Howe kicked from behind his goal line to Potter who was downed without a return on Yale's 40-yard line. Potter tried a forward pass which Smith failed to get under. Childs replaced Fuller in the Yale line up. Potter kicked out of bounds just as the whistle sounded.

Second Half.
When the second half started Wigglesworth was back in the Harvard lineup instead of Potter and Fuller was back at left guard in the Yale line. Morrison was at full back in place of Leslie.
In this quarter Kistler made five yards and then circled Harvard's right for 3 yards. It was first down for Yale on her 40-yard line. The quarter ended with the ball in Harvard's possession in midfield.

Fourth Quarter.
Yale defending the north goal again and having a stiff wind at her back, began the last quarter. Corbett was in the line up again for Harvard and on the first play he plunged through for ten yards. Later, Wendell tried the right of Yale's line, but was tackled so hard that he fumbled and it was Yale's ball on the Blue's 13 yard line. At this stage of the game, crossed wires at the right end of the Yale stand net fire to the sea-felling and for a moment looked as if there might be trouble. The smoke filtered up through the stands but Harry Lyons, captain of the student police called in his assistants and the men, armed with extinguishers, put out the flames before any serious damage was done. The people behaved admirably.

Scoring the ball on Yale's 35 yard line. Howe punted to Wendell who was downed on Yale's 50-yard line out of bounds. Wendell made 80 yards through left tackle, scored placed Field. Kistler failed in a plunge at center and

MICHIGAN--6 MINNESOTA--0

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 19.—In a fiercely contested game Saturday Yost's warriors of Michigan University defeated Minnesota by a score of 6 to 0.
The game was witnessed by the greatest crowd in years.

P. H. S. Is Winner

Ironton, O., Nov. 19.—(Special to Times).—Ironton High School was unable to solve Portsmouth's defense for the second time this year and were defeated by the score of 11 to 0. The features of the game were the long sensational runs of Captain Williams of Portsmouth, who helped in the scoring of the Red and Blue.

Tom Wants to Be A Porter

Tom Henderson, a well known West Side farmer and politician, circulated among his Democratic friends Saturday, securing signatures to a petition. Tom is after the job of porter in the House of Representatives at Columbus.

Celebrates Birthday

Thomas Scott, father of Dave, Tom and Bert Scott, celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday anniversary with a family reunion at his home on Jackson street, Friday. Mr. Scott is in the best of health and seemingly good for at least twenty more years.

Puzzled At Dooin's Act

An exchange says: "The ball players are still wondering why Manager Dooin of the Phillies, allowed Eddie Grant to go to Cincinnati. They say that Grant is one of the best third basemen in the business and that he is certain to make Cincinnati a first division team. In addition to that they are of the opinion that Fitcher McJannet will be the star pitcher of the Reds. Dooin gets a good man in Lobert, who is a wonderful hitter, base runner and 'inside' player. At the same time Lobert is not as good a fielder as Eddie Grant, who can also hit."

Reynolds Is Found Guilty

Layton Reynolds who was arrested last Saturday evening by Sheriff Gillen on a bench warrant charging a violation of the county local option laws was found guilty of furnishing liquor to several persons before Judge Blair Saturday afternoon. He drew the customary $200 and costs and to stand committed to the Cincinnati workhouse until paid. He will go to the works.

Testimony was introduced showing that Reynolds had allowed a number of boys including Thomas Hammond, aged 17, to drink freely of his liquor while they were returning from the city to their homes on Dry Run on Nov. 11. Young Hammond got badly "soaked" and created quite a disturbance in the neighborhood.

Has Amended His Petition

An amended petition has been filed by Attorney George O. Newman for Bernard Augustin in his suit against Frank Jeffords to recover $70 on an account. The petition states that the book containing the accounts was lost during the high water of 1881 and though he has rendered statements to Jeffords at Kansas City, Mo., he has not paid the amount.

Sent On To Columbus

The city authorities furnished Mrs. Haley Harrison with a charity pass to Columbus, Saturday. The woman and a baby had been sent here by Ashland authorities, Saturday. She was on her way to the bedside of her husband, who is ill in a Columbus hospital, but had no money to get beyond Portsmouth.

They Do Love Holidays

All barber shop proprietors will observe Thanksgiving Day by keeping their places closed all day. They will keep open until 11 o'clock the night before for the accommodation of patrons.

FORMER RESIDENT IS BADLY INJURED

George Williams, a former employee of the Irving Drew Co., was hit by an engine, and badly injured, near Akron, O., Thursday night. He sustained a crushed skull, right arm broken; three ribs smashed and internal injuries. It is not thought that he will live. Williams was hurried to an Akron hospital where he is making a desperate battle for life.
Word of the accident came as a great shock to a number of local shoeworkers who knew the man when he worked here two years ago. Williams left here to take a job in the machinist department of the Goodrich Rubber Co. of Akron. He was hard worker and a promising young man.
The accident occurred on the Pennsylvania tracks near Akron. Williams had been hunting and was walking the ties home. A freight engine came up behind him in the darkness and struck him, as stated. Williams was picked up by hunting companions and placed on board the engine and hurried to Akron. He was still living Friday, according to word received by George Gies of East Seventh street.

Wild Rumor That Graves Are Robbed

Supt. Crain of Greenlawn cemetery states that there is absolutely no truth in the rumors that graves are being robbed. Scores of people have been going to the cemetery lately to find out if graves of their relatives have been disturbed. "There is little chance for anything like that to happen," said Mr. Crain. "We keep a close watch on the cemetery and I cannot understand how such reports got started."

THE MARKETS

Chicago, Nov. 19.—The week just passed has been one what is called on the Board as a waiting one. Changes have been very few in the prices of all cereals. The market has been very sensitive.
Reports from all the flour mills have been very discouraging, large numbers of them have closed down by lack of orders for accumulated stock. This naturally tends towards a sluggish market in wheat, and the wind up of the week showed no improvement.
During the week the market had a little spurt on reports received of bad weather in the Argentine. This was counteracted, however, by increased receipts causing the market to slump off again, and closed to day at about the lowest point of the week.
Old corn has been in good demand all week, and is commanding full prices, the reason of this good demand for old corn is the unmercantable condition and the small amount of new corn that has been received. It is anticipated, however, that receipts from now on beginning the first of the coming week will be very large, as the farmers are willing to take the present prices, and are just waiting until their corn is in condition, so that the dealers will receive it. It is expected to be in that condition the coming week, and with the extraordinary large crop and with the slack demand, especially the export demand, it looks as if the prices must go considerably lower.
Other cereals are about the same as my last report, it will require a good export demand which is not indicated at this time to sustain the present prices.

ERNEST RIEF IS BURIED AT OLD HOME

The remains of Ernest F. Rief, 31, a well known C. & O. freight conductor, who died at his home in Huntington suddenly Wednesday afternoon from an attack of heart trouble were brought to Wheelersburg Saturday morning for burial.
He was a nephew of William, George and Peter Rief, prominent residents of Wheelersburg, and where his parents, now deceased, lived for years. He is survived by one brother, Chester of Charleston, W. Va., and five sisters, only two of whom were able to be present at the funeral.
The body was taken direct from the train to the cemetery and services were conducted at the grave by Rev. Pfaltzgraf in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Chas. James Much Improved

Charles James, the East Front resident who fell off a house top, while putting on a rubberoid roof Friday afternoon, was much improved Saturday.
Attorney and Mrs. Theo. K. Funk returned Saturday noon from Georgetown, where Mr. Funk argued a motion for a new trial of the Martin vs. Plaugher case in circuit court. Mr. Funk was invited to attend a banquet given complimentary to Judge Cherrington by the Brown county bar Friday night, but press of business precluded his presence there.

Doc Got His Quail Easy

Dr. E. O. McCall woke up early Saturday morning and found a basket on his rear door step. Doc at first trembled, as visions of a wait flashed across his mind, but investigation showed some unknown friend had sent him a half dozen blue quail and a couple of rabbits.

TEAM IS OFF TO Ironton SATURDAY

A squad of husky pigskin warriors, representing Portsmouth High school left Saturday noon for Ironton on N. & W. train 16. Part of the boys left on No. 18 early Saturday morning. A good sized crowd of enthusiastic rooters accompanied the team. Coach Crevling stated that the chances for victory were good. The team seemed happy and generally expressed confidence over the outcome of the game.
The announcement that Rea Selby will be unable to play football any more this season has caused universal regret among the supporters of the Red and Blue. Selby's injured ankle makes it impossible for him to run.

Freight Is Tied Up

The Portsmouth Branch of the B. & O. S. W. just now is experiencing one of the worst freight congestions in years.
Agent John H. Sands said Saturday that there are 100 car loads of freight consigned to Portsmouth at various points between Hamilton and this city. The company has not sufficient equipment to move same at once. Traffic has taken on a decided increase in the past week and the local freight depot force has been over-rushed with work.

Is Nice For The Judge

Judge Blair will not go to West Union to hold court next week, as the cases set for hearing were criminal cases, and the offenders have escaped from jail and have not yet been captured.

Will Not Build A Club Room

The plan of building a Masonic club room here has met its fate and is declared off, says the Lucasville Rural Gazette. Diversity of opinion as to the merit and advisability of the plans caused it to go by the board. It was a good move and should have went through by a unanimous vote of the entire membership.

Has Bought A New Home

Lucasville, O., Nov. 10.—W. T. Glaze, who has resided on Bear Creek for a number of years, and who purchased the J. H. Rose, well known home here some time ago, moved into his new home last week.
Mr. Rockwell moved to his farm near the fair grounds, and is occupying the house jointly, with Chas. Appel, who rents the farm.

Dandy, the city patrol horse, has been transferred from the police station to the Seventh street fire station, to be used in the place of one of the fire horses which is sick and unable to make a run should an alarm come in.

JIM POLLY SAILED THROUGH THE AIR

Negro Jim Polly met with an accidental fall Friday evening, which eye witnesses declare, would have killed the average white man.
Polly came up out of the Scioto bottoms with a big load of corn fodder. He was seated on top and evidently fell asleep in coming through a narrow lane near the hospital, for the wagon struck a telephone pole and upset. Fodder and all. Polly's heels were seen flying far above and he landed squarely on his head. Jim Sneed and others rushed forward, expecting to find him killed, but Polly arose to his feet quickly and looked around to see if anyone was watching him. He escaped with a sprained wrist and the loss of several teeth.

Craig Sent To Work House

Roy Craig who was arrested on Friday on a warrant charging him with contributing to the delinquency of 14-year-old Edith Noel, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Beatty Friday evening. Sentence was deferred until Saturday afternoon when he drew three months in the Cincinnati work house and a fine of $100 and costs and to stand committed to the works until paid. He will no doubt have to work out the $100 and costs also.

With The Hunters

All Bridwell, the famous New York Giant shortstop, and Stanley Pritchard, the auto dealer, got in from Duck Run Friday night, where they ran down the game with their dogs and their rouble-barreled guns. Al. Bridwell displayed some good marksmanship, Pritchard says, and seems to be as good a hitter of flying quail as he is a slinger of pitched balls. Al's hitting averaged about 1,000 Friday on Duck Run.
Lou Riley and sons, Ivan and Will, bagged eight rabbits, sixteen quail and a jaybird near McGaw Thursday.

Finnan Amberg got home from Winchester Friday with 37 rabbits and 36 quail and reports the game plentiful in that section.
George Sommer spent an entire day near his old stamping grounds on Carey's Run without a sign of any game.
Neil Sommer returned home from Carey's Run Thursday evening with one measly little rabbit.

Bob Stahler and Ralph Calvert had fair luck on the West Side on Thursday. Roy Lynn and Jack Carpenter spent Friday hunting near Arion. Joe Schaefer is hunting near Henley. "Shorty" Wheeler returned from South Webster Thursday night and went out bright and early Friday for a day's hunt on the West Side with C. W. Wilson. Fred Warner took a run up to Scioto Furnace and an Interstate wagon will meet him tonight. Frank Amann is home from a successful three days' hunt near Clifford. Paul Esselborn got the limit in a half day's hunt through the Bottoms Thursday. Carl Burkhardt and Ray Ruthmeyer returned from Carter Caves, Ky., with almost 70 birds. Henry Frowine and Joe Peebles put in Friday hunting on Bear Creek and Alex Gloekner, Howard Harsha and Ray Ruthmeyer are at Sargent's. Harry Gillen brought home a fine supply of birds from Franklin Furnace.

N. & W. Engineer Frank Moatz and brother Carl, returned Friday from a two-days hunting trip in the vicinity of Haverhill.
Ferm Amberg returned home Friday from a successful hunting tour on the West Side. He got the limit the law permits and expects to make another expedition in the near future.
One complaint of hunters who have been on the West Side most of the week is that quail are unusually small this season.

Classes In Big Contest

Mrs. Smith's class of young ladies, and Mr. J. H. Breese's class of young men, both of Trinity Sunday school, held a meeting Friday night at the Smith residence. As recently stated in The Times, the classes are engaged in a contest. The following officials of the contest were elected: President, Ralph Loft; Secretary, Mary Vaughters; Treasurer, Edson Tenor.
Mrs. Smith's class is at present leading in the contest. The two classes will hold another meeting next Friday night.

Walter Bierly and Rev. C. S. Robertson had a successful hunt in the vicinity of Bloom Switch Friday. They returned home on Friday night.
Sam Adams and Attorney Henry and Arthur Bannon left Saturday morning for a big quail hunt beyond Lucasville.
H. L. Coleman, a shoemaker of this city, who left a few days ago on a visit to home folks at Lynch-

EVENING TIMES SPORTS

SAM CRANE'S VIEWS OF BEST SHORT STOP

Much has been said and written and comparisons made concerning who is the best shortstop in the National League. Sam Crane, the noted New York writer and baseball expert, writes interestingly on the subject in the New York Journal.

Inasmuch as Crane picks Al Bridwell, a product of the Portsmouth, and Joe Tinker, of the Cubs, as the best shortstops in the land, the story will be particularly interesting to Bridwell's friends in his home city. He says that it is a tie between the pair for the honor, and gives the following excellent reasons. Crane says:

"During a 1910 series between the Giants and Cubs at the Polo Grounds two of the best shortstops now playing ball—Bridwell and Tinker—faced one another in their respective positions, and it was a real treat to see them perform. They are both classy and in that important series they showed to their true form. They both seemed to appreciate the wonderful ability of each other, and in every game of the four played there was a battle royal of shortstops.

From every angle of play, the only fair decision would be to give a draw between them.

Since the passing of Hans Wagner, the mainstay of the Pirates, Bridwell and Tinker are easily the premier shortstops of the country. To venture to say that the great Wagner is passing or going back will be considered a sacrilege, no doubt, not alone in Pittsburgh but throughout the league circuit—but the fact remains that the awkward Dutchman is not coming, even if many think he is not falling off.

But Wagner's record, both in fielding and batting, this season is so far behind his remarkable showing in previous years as a Pirate, that there must be a reason for it, and the most notable conclusion to arrive at is that age is telling on the old veteran.

Youth must prevail in statistics. There is no getting around that, and there have been more object lessons this year in baseball to prove it than in any previous season that I remember. Wagner's tumble from form came so suddenly that it startled fandom. He still gives flashes of his old-time brilliancy, as veterans always do, when they are on the decline, but that his remarkable ability is on the wane is plain to everybody who has carefully studied his season's work of 1910.

Bridwell and Tinker are classy because they are heady. They both are blessed with baseball brains and know how to use them, and that fortunate combination is sure to result in star players, but without it star ball players are not developed.

Tinker has the reputation among ball players of being the brains of the Cubs, but with the peerless leader, Frank Chance, in charge of them that would seem to be a rather far-fetched conclusion. But Joe Tinker knows as much baseball as Chance or any player in the country for that matter, and so, too, does Al Bridwell. The latter, however, is much less demonstrative than his Cub rival, and on that account fails to get the full appreciation that is his due.

There was never a more graceful player than Bridwell. His every move is a dream, and he makes plays so easily that his most difficult ones are made to appear ridiculously simple, where some shortstops would be breaking their backs

UNIQUE PLAY DESCRIBED BY PHELON

W. A. Phelon writing in the Sporting News about funny and unique incidents of the playing of baseball, has this to say of a novel feature of a game played at Cincinnati:

"Down in Redville one hot Sunday afternoon, when Griffith's team still had a fighting chance, and was grappling with the Pirates for third position, a huge audience had turned out to cheer their pets and exorcise the Pittsburgh crowd. Gaspar was pitching good and heady ball; the Reds were holding up manfully against the fierce attack, and the mob was dancing on the bleachers in delicious excitement.

"Along about the seventh inning, Gaspar wavered for a moment and Fred Clarke belted him for a hot single. Then the inning drifted on, till Clarke stood on second, two men out and Wagner at the plate. One of Gaspar's down-curved shoots broke through the mittens of huge Larry McLean and fell between the gunboat feet of the gigantic catcher.

"Long Larry bent down and fished for the ball, which had rolled behind his legs. As he scooped around for the leather, Wagner pointed his bat towards the Pittsburgh bench and remarked, without a smile of guilty token: 'Over there.'

"And McLean calmly mooched over toward the Pirate bench, looking in the grass for the missing ball, while Clarke skinned to third. Wagner sat down on the plate to laugh, and the populace rose like one man with cries of 'Bouncehead!'

"Incidentally, that break seemed to put the Reds completely on the silled toboggan, and the Pirates, by a fierce batting rally, cleaned up the decision."

IS TO MANAGE MOBILE

"Ducky" Holmes, the scrappy baseball manager, who failed to pilot the Toledo Mud Hens successfully last spring, has landed at last. He will try his hand at handling the Mobile team in the Southern league in 1911. 'Ducky' has been sailing as a manager for several years and has tried in a dozen different cities and in many different circuits and invariably has always "managed" to get in trouble, if nothing more, through his troublesome ways. Holmes wore a Baltimore uniform and won much fame while playing there under Ned Hanlon when the team that represented that city copped three pennants in the 90's.

WADDELL NOT PLEASED AT HIS TRADE

Rube Waddell feels terribly put out because he has been transferred from Newark to Columbus. Waddell was the property of the St. Louis Americans and, of course, he was at the owner's disposal.

In St. Louis the famed but eccentric southpaw persisted in falling off the water wagon and he was placed on the market. Not an offer was received, many managers would have probably taken him as a gift, but the club asked $1000 for him. In desperation Rube was loaned to Newark. Finally Columbus came across with the money and now that club can boast of having one of the greatest cards in the business. The secretary of the Newark club is reported to have said that Waddell earned his entire salary as an attraction the first week he was with the club.

There is no use talking, the Rube will mingle with the white lights and tingle the cut glass with friends. That's the answer to the career of one of the greatest pitchers and best attractions in baseball.

HAS FAITH IN MARQUARD

Paddy Livingston, the Athletic catcher, thinks Rube Marquard is still worth every cent of the $11,000 said to have been paid for him by the Giants and has advised Connie Mack to grab the big southpaw if McGraw ever asks for waivers on him. Livingston and Marquard formed the star battery for the Indianapolis team, that won the American Association pennant in 1908. Livingston is of the opinion that he could coach Rube back to his 1903 form. It is a well-known fact that many twirlers show at their best only with certain backstops and the Athletic catcher worked with Marquard when the latter was at his best.

HERE ARE THE REAL FIGURES

A baseball statistician gives the following figures as a result of many hours of hard labor:

During the 1910 season the major leagues drew more than 9,000,000 paid admissions.

About fifty minor leagues are doing business.

The clubs average 150 games each, a total of 30,000.

The average minor league attendance is 800.

This gives a total minor league attendance of 24,000,000.

Added to the 9,000,000 major league attendance, the grand total in round numbers is 33,000,000 paid admissions.

In cash this represents about $11,000,000.

ED. RANSICK CATCHES ON IN SOUTH

Ed Ransick who was manager of the Springfield Ohio State league team when that club was transferred to Portsmouth in mid-season of 1907 and finished the season here, will lead the Charleston (S. C.) club of the South Atlantic league next year.

The South Atlantic is one of the swiftest little leagues among the minors and it is doubtful if there is another league in the country where so many star players have been developed and graduated to the big show. Notably among the crack players now performing in the majors who started their careers in that league are Ty Cobb and Nap Rucker.

At a recent meeting of the club owners the circuit was enlarged from a six to an eight club league, Charleston being one of the new cities.

NEW FOOT BALL DESIGNS FOR 1910.

WILLIE KEELER MAY BOSSERIE, PA. TEAM

Willie Keeler, the last of the famous old Baltimore champions Orioles to see active service in the majors is being touted for manager of the Erie, Pa., O. & P. league team for 1911. The "Wee One" was one of the grandest outfielders and hitters the game has ever known. For years he was among the leading batsmen and won the honor of being the best hitter of the National several times. Besides helping win three championships at Baltimore he assisted in copping two pennants at Brooklyn after the Baltimore team was shifted to that city.

Keeler during his long service in the majors made a great record. His strong fort was place hitting and he was the peer of 'em all in that respect. His work always stood out prominently until a couple of seasons ago when it was first noticed that he had reached the declining stage. He lost his speed and his eye was not as keen as in years gone by and as a consequence his hitting slumped. Father Time had counted out the little speed merchant.

Keeler was with the New York Giants last season as batting instructor and coach and is still on the reserve list of that club, however, it is known that the management would do most anything for him and would not hesitate in giving him a free rein in case the managerial berth is tendered him.

Otterbein Is Surely On Foot Ball Map

Westerville, O., Nov. 19.—(Special to Times)—Otterbein is certainly on the football map this season, for it has the best team in its history. With the season now almost over, only one game has been lost, and that to Ohio State, after Otterbein had accomplished what Yost's great Michigan machine failed to do—score a touchdown on the hustling Slaters.

After defeating such teams as Cincinnati, Ohio Northern, Kenyon, and Athens, it is confidently expected that the local eleven will go through the season without another defeat registered against them, as the only remaining game is at Wittenberg on Thanksgiving Day.

Of course, the real foundation of Otterbein's splendidly organized team lies with Albert Exandine, the Indian coach, who came here after making end on the All-American team by virtue of his sensational playing with the Carlisle Indians. Otterbein pays this coach the largest salary of any school of its size in the country, and his worth has become so well recognized that he is being considered as a strong possibility at Case for next season, the average.

But Otterbein has more than a coach. In Sanders, quarterback, the local eleven has one of the best field generals in the business, and the best maker of forward passes in the state. His work in this respect borders on the sensational in almost every game, and every team Otterbein now plays passes along the word, "Look out for Sanders!"

John, at fullback, is being picked by the best critics as all-state full this year. His line plunging is the most terrific in the state, while his punts have averaged fifty yards. It is he who scored the touchdown on Ohio State by a sensational ninety-five yard run, and in the Antioch-Otterbein game he made a touchdown from the kick off, after a one hundred yard run through the entire Antioch team. Coach Exandine says John can make any team in the country.

Mottis, right half, is a star at carrying the ball. Runs of twenty to fifty yards in every game are common for this husky youngster, in the country, and his worth has become so well recognized that he is being considered as a strong possibility at Case for next season, the average.

In Hurry To Get To Party And So Ended the Fight

Joe Jeanette, the colored prize fighter, is one of the wittiest characters among the padded mitt artists. He seems to be endowed with a peculiar sense of humor. One night recently in New York when he was fighting Black Bill at one of the clubs, Joe was in a hurry to see a party up-town. So in the beginning of the fifth round he advanced to the middle of the ring and offered to shake hands with his opponent.

"Why," said Black Bill, "this isn't the last round, Joe."

"That's all right," retorted Joe, "it'll be the last round for you," and with that snail shot out a hard right that landed on poor Bill's jaw with a bang and down he went.

Joe put over the knockout and then hurried on his way.

Good Story Is Told By Frank Bancroft

Frank C. Bancroft the veteran business manager of the Cincinnati Reds chirped during a recent faning here the following concerning story of an odd happening in Redville in connection with the interruption of a championship game:

"Numerous instances of championship games being interrupted for some extraordinary or some unusual reason, have occurred, but perhaps the oddest of them all happened in a game at Cincinnati many years ago. We were having a red-hot battle with Chicago that day, and in the eighth inning, with the score 1 to 1, McPhee hit a ball down to short too hot for Dahlen to handle cleanly. McPhee had been anchored on first about two seconds when two men jumped over the rail separating the grandstand from the field and started out toward 'Biddy.' It all happened so suddenly that at first we thought McPhee was to be given some kind of a present, other, but we were soon undeceived. In those days the fans bet on everything that could possibly happen—but the next delivery of the pitcher would be a 'ball' or a 'strike,' bet that the batter would strike out; bet that he wouldn't; bet that he would go out to the infield; fly out to the outfield, or foul out; bet that the umpire would call the next man who tried to steal 'out' or 'safe'; bet it would rain or snow; bet the game wouldn't go nine innings; bet it would end in a tie, and so on to the uttermost possibilities of the game. Well, on this day one of the men who had wandered out on the field to talk to McPhee took off his hat, and addressing the popular second baseman of the Reds in a tone clearly audible to the stands, said: 'Biddy, to decide a bet, will you please tell us whether that was a hit for you or an error for Dahlen? I bet this man 2 to 5 that you would make a hit, and we ain't able to decide which it was.' Before the umpires and the captains could chase the men off the field McPhee piped up: 'Say, if you guys live to be a million years old, you'll never see a cleaner base hit than that.' And it is my recollection that the official scorer was of the same opinion."

OLD OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 19.—H. H. Sexton, of Rock Island, was re-elected president, and J. H. Farrell, of Auburn, N. Y., secretary of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, at the annual meeting. The class AA base ball was laid at rest in the same meeting. Mr. Farrell was named for ten years and his salary was raised to $5,000 a year.

Class C and D leagues were given representation on the National Board of Arbitration, which body was increased to eight members—three to be chosen from Class A leagues, three from those of Class B and one each from Classes C and D.

Stanton McGuire, the car record keeper at the B. & O. S. Y. office, is off duty on account of illness.

How A Times Newsboy Has Made Own Way And Come Out On Top

Dr. Carl Braunlin, of this city, who recently received an appointment to the Philippines, is the subject of a big "write-up" in the Times-Star of Friday. Braunlin is a well known Portsmouth boy, who started out in life as a carrier of the Portsmouth Times. He is at present visiting his parents on Ninth street, awaiting his orders from the government surgical department. The Times-Star said:

On last Thursday Dr. Carl Braunlin was graduated as interne from the Cincinnati Hospital and is now awaiting orders from the United States Government to proceed to either Panama or the Philippines. In October Dr. Braunlin took the competitive examination of the Government and stood first among 50 competitors. He was immediately accepted and ordered to the canal zone, but as he was desirous of graduating as an interne, he requested the Government to be allowed to remain in this country until November 10. His request was granted and he was ordered to hold himself in readiness after that date.

Do you remember "John Shaud" in "What Every Woman Knows," the Scotch boy who hanged a house that he might have access to a library? Well, Dr. Braunlin's thirst for knowledge was as great as "John Shaud's," but he took an even more heroic and far more lawful method of gratifying it. It was in 1893 that young Carl Braunlin came up from Portsmouth, O., to enter the Miami Medical College. At the conclusion of his second year he realized that there was one thing that would eventually place him in the front rank of the medical profession, an opportunity to study in the clinics of Vienna.

He had sufficient funds for railroad fare to New York, and twelve dollars to assist him across the ocean and pay his way to Vienna. What did he do? Why, he took the train for New York. Arriving in that city he went down to the docks and watched the steamers lying at anchor. A little questioning and he discovered that by acting as waiter and cabin boy on one of the slower liners, he could arrive in Naples free of cost. So the embryonic doctor shipped as a menial and when he at last arrived on Neapolitan shores he still had that twelve dollars. From Naples young Braunlin walked through Italy when he was not appropriating a ride on an Italian fast freight, and finally he got over in Austria and reached Vienna. In Vienna it was all work. At night he could be seen carrying choice viands in a fashionable cafe, with a dress coat on his back and a napkin over his arm. But the waiter of the evening became the student during the day, and Braunlin was an attentive pupil at the great clinics of Vienna.

After a year of unremitting work the young man started back to these United States with about as much money as he had on the outward journey, but he had become proficient in the gentle art of traveling without paying your fare and the task seemed easier. Upon his return to Cincinnati, Dr. Braunlin resumed his studies at the Miami Medical College and was graduated from that institution in 1908. In the examination to run internship he stood first among thirty applicants, and this was without any coaching or quizzing. These are facts in the early life of one who seems destined to reach the first rank of his profession, and in justice to Dr. Braunlin's modest demeanor, it must be said that they are related without his knowledge or consent.

his job even, saying nothing about any thing else.

With due deference to the wisdom of our local Democratic friends we just wish to state that the Democratic victory, as we Socialists see it, was due to the cry of hunger in the midst of plenty that is going up from the American people. It was the appeal for bread that routed the Republican machine and it depends upon how the Democratic party answers this hunger cry whether there is ever another Democratic victory in this country. One thing is assured, the Socialists from the present time on, are going to contest at every election, and propose to go in to win, not in ten or twenty years, but next year and every year thereafter. And let us not forget this fact, for it is a fact, Socialism as a growing party out of power has more influence for reform than either of the old parties in power. Old party politicians are saying "We must do something for the working class or the Socialists are going to sweep the country." So we may look for some good reform laws to be passed this winter. But Socialists contend that the entire industrial system must be changed and no amount of reforming will save the present system or result in any lasting good.

No class is good enough to govern and it is against the spirit of the age that we should have class rule. Co-operation is in the air and it will win, and that speedily, its attendant miseries are an economic disease and can only be cured by removing the cause i. e., the private ownership of natural resources and the machinery of production and distribution. Ownership by the few is the direct cause of the poverty of the many and the only way out is through co-operative ownership. At present the working man does not own

The Boss of the Establishment

Patiently and His Forgiving Nature, He Decides, Are His Strong Points.

BY AMERE MANN.

"Hello!" said the siren voice of evening, teach his wife a much needed lesson?
"I've been shopping and I'm so late that I thought, maybe you could go out home with me."
"What train can you take?" inquired the Boss of the Establishment.

"The 3:05," answered the lady.
"Sure, I'll meet you at the station," the Boss answered, and sallied forth to get a fresh shave that he might be fit to accompany his wife to their suburban villa.
It was fifteen minutes before starting time when he reached the station and he knew his habitually dilatory spouse had not had time to make the longer trip from the shopping district. So he settled himself at the mouth of the subway entrance to wait for her.
For five minutes the Boss stood there patiently enough. It was only now and then that a woman passenger bridled under his close scrutiny and managed by subtle pantomime to convey the impression that he was trying to flirt with her and that his attentions were decidedly unwelcome.

The poor Boss, who did not know what dress his wife was wearing, was merely trying to select the lady of his heart from the crowd of returning bargain hunters, and his face flushed uncomfortably and set in rigid lines under the obvious misinterpretation of his wholly innocent glance.

The perception that women misunderstood him was only less poignantly disagreeable than the realization that men did not.

On the whole, a man would rather be suspected by his own kind of villainy where women are concerned than of excessive good nature.
"I suppose those fellows all know I'm waiting for a woman and are saying: 'Poor thing, I don't blame his girl for standing him up!'"

Fired by this tormenting picture, he decided that he would not wait a minute longer and consulted his watch.
It was eight minutes past three and the train his wife had said she would take had pulled out from the station.

Should he wait for the next train of go back to New York and by returning at a late hour that wife or no wife, he would take the 4:08 to Mountville.

He did so, but by that time his resentment had changed to alarm, and it was in vain that reason told him the subway must be blocked and his wife, held up between two stations, was unable to communicate the cause of her delay.

No, she must have been run over! He had always cautioned her against her habit of walking in front of street cars and automobiles with the placid unconcern of a traffic policeman.

Perhaps there would be some message from her at the house. If not he would take the first train back to New York and look for her.
By this time the Boss was so much concerned that he was only pretending to read his evening paper, and when a man shambled over his feet upon getting out at an intermediate station the Boss growled at him with a ferocity his dog Wolf-woof had never attained.

When Mountville was at last reached the thoroughly alarmed Boss started hurriedly across the tracks to a telephone booth.

By calling up his Mountville number he would learn a few minutes sooner if his wife had been heard from.

But what was it he saw snatching gaily down the hill to meet him!

Wolf-woof, wagging a wireless greeting, was in the lead, and behind him hotless, smiling and looking as if she had never seen the grimy city, was the Boss' wife!

A great wave of relief rose in the Boss' breast, and was promptly swallowed up by a larger wave of resentment.

So it was for that fresh, cheerful, unconcerned young person that he had been worrying his heart out for the last two hours!

"So sorry you couldn't make my train," cooed the Boss' wife, "but, of course, I knew you wouldn't want me to wait for you."

"Wait for me!" exclaimed the Boss indignantly. "What train did you take?"

"Why the 3:05, of course. I got aboard very early and waited and waited for you. I really thought I caught a glimpse of you at the subway exit just as the train was pulling out."

The Boss swallowed hard. Then he told his story as calmly as he could. But a thrill of anger was in his final words.

"There I stood waiting my heels for two hours cooling for you!" he said. "You bet I'll never do it again!"

"No," his wife retorted sweetly, "you mustn't, for some people might think you were only mashing."

EMBROIDERED CORSET ACCESSORIES

NOT all embroidered, strictly speaking, but all bits of delicate fancy work that the butterfly among your acquaintances will be delighted to receive as Christmas gifts if you will start to make them now. With a little extra care, she likes to feel that every little accessory pertaining to them is equally dainty. And there are many of these accessories which, as I have said, may be made at home.

There are the main sticking supports, for instance. To make these, use plain garter elastic, or a pair of ordinary white elastic garters, and remove the metal attachments. Measure the elastic and purchase thin satin muslin ribbon, in white or in a light shade to match the corset, using one and a half times the length of the rubber. On two pieces of the ribbon embroider a tiny spray of flowers. These embroidered pieces are the upper halves of the garter. Now join the edges with a double row of shirring and sew an edging of valenciennes lace on either side. Insert the elastic, finish neatly at the top, sew in a strong button and then, add the hook-and-button attachment at the bottom. This last should be taken from an ordinary pair of rubber garters. Finally, a rosette of baby ribbon at the bottom of the shirred satin is a pretty finish.

Many figures require a ruffa sewed over the top of the corset cover to make the waist set well. To make this, use coarse muslin, pleated like a Pierrot ruff and run with baby ribbon that ends in a rosette.

A combined pad and sachet can be made of dainty white muslin with valenciennes edging and caught together in the middle with a rosette of baby ribbon. Stuff with absorbent cotton well sprinkled with sachet powder.

Even the woman who does not wish a pad like a sachet in her corset, for she makes the ribbon sachet. This consists of strips of satin ribbon one-half to three-quarters of an inch wide. Work these in and out over a piece of cardboard, in the "darning" weave used in paper mats in the kindergarten. When finished to the size desired, take out the cardboard and insert a thin, folded piece of tissue paper filled with sachet powder. Sew the end, point or embroider a spray of flowers on one side and finish with a small bow of narrow ribbon.

A pretty jewel pocket, which can be fastened to the corset at the waist, is of white muslin, the edges caught together with white and gold thread and the flap fastened with a glove clasp. On the back of this sew a bow of stiff satin ribbon wide enough to hide the pocket. At top and bottom strong safety pins are sewed.

Finally there is the corset roll, which should hold the corset when not in use. Get from a stationer an odd length of wood roller, as thick as possible. Sew muslin on this; do not paste or glue. Cover again with a thin sheet of absorbent cotton, then with another layer sprinkled with sachet powder. Last, cover with thick white or shirred satin. Do not roll corsets upon it until they have been thoroughly aired and dried.

Sewing Helps

IN SEWING very sheer lains or lightweight silks, if they gather under the machine foot, slip a piece of newspaper under the goods and sew through it, too, and the gathering will cease. The paper is easily removed, and leaves no trace.

Mothers know what trouble it is to have buttons pulling off and tearing a hole in the garment, and to have buttonholes tear out, for they are hard to repair. If two or four extra thick-layers of the goods be put into bands or hem where the strain comes on buttons or buttonholes, and a fine cotton thread used in sewing on buttons and working buttonholes, it will usually prevent the tearing out and save much work and annoyance.

If bits of muslin, calico, lawn or flannel be turned and pressed with an iron, it saves the wear of heading and is just as satisfactory.

Two Made-Overs

DO YOU know that you could make over your old tailored shirtwaist for house wear in the morning? Cut out the neck at the collarband and the sleeves at the cuffs. Supply instead plain percale low collars and turn-back cuffs of some contrasting color. Cut off the skirt sections, which are usually torn by pinning, and supply a belt of the percale. This belt will fasten over the skirt; thus, all you will need to complete your outfit when dressing hurriedly in the morning will be a pin to hold your collar closed.

Another made-over is the apron which was originally a lingerie blouse. Use the front, cutting a bit of extra cloth and tie-ends of the belt. The back will make the belt and face the lower edge. With a little ribbon-run binding and a lace ruffle, here is an apron you will not be ashamed to pour tea or do embroidery in.

Sewing Harsh Goods

IT IS very hard to sew such harsh goods as calico and heavy muslin, since the needles break very easily. This difficulty may be overcome by rubbing the heel or seam with a dry piece of soap, when the needle will penetrate without difficulty. This plan is equally good for both machine and hand work.

To Clean Embroidery

IF a camel-hair brush in spirits of wine and brush all over the embroidery until it is quite clean. The brush should be frequently rinsed in some pure spirits, in sailing glass, to remove the dirt. The embroidery need not be taken out of the garment or piece.

HIS or her royal highness needs your attention just now, and what can be daintier than a handmade gift of a cap and bib embroidered in this babyish design of dainty bowknots, daisies and forget-me-nots? For your own little one, or for your friend's baby, this page suggests an idea for Christmas, or for a christening gift, or just because you love it.

You should work this on fine linen or muslin. I think that with very fine work no padding is required, the design being sufficiently close to give a lovely effect. If you wish, you can slightly pad the bowknots on the turned-back flap of the bonnet.

The forget-me-nots you will work across the petals, using fine mercerized cotton. Do the leaves also in solid stitch and the stems in the best kind of stem stitch. Pad the scallops and work as usual with fine buttonhole stitch.

When doing the daisy forms you can give variety by working them in crested stitch, but the solid work is equally effective.

When working the attractive flap for the bonnet you will find that you can introduce eyelet work here with greater freedom, for there is practically no strain and the design is solid enough to allow the relief of openwork.

Do the tiny forget-me-nots as directed for the bib, and the stems and leaves in a similar way.

Suppose that you do not wish to work the bowknots solid. A delightful variation is, outlining the ribbon with outline stitch. With this a second time, placing the needle in at the overlapped parts of the stem, and then fill in the stem with the seed-stitch, which really are small back stitches in parallel lines. The round form is for the back, and the tie-end speaks for itself in its pretty completeness. Baby caps and bibs are among the most appreciated articles in the little wardrobe. There can never be too many of them, and today I think that you are especially fortunate in having this page from which to work.

A Picture Apron

A FRACTIONAL child can often be amused for a long while if mother or nurse reserves for this restless mood a play apron covered with pictures of old figures. An easy model for such an apron is to gather straight folds of red muslin to a band that buttons around the child's chest, just under the arms. This is held in place by straps over the shoulders. On each side of the front are set-on pockets.

Cut pictures from linen books, or draw figures and animals on different colored muslins. These may be either applied to the apron in borders and panels or they can be pasted with a four parts to one glue, and be washed off when the apron is soiled, and a new supply put on.

Annoyances

EVERY woman knows how annoying it is to use a new spool of lace thread on the spindle or the sewing machine. To avoid the usual tangling and breaking of the thread, use a small bag, with a wire around the top to hold it open.

Suspend it from a tiny screweye fastened under the back edge of the machine table. Drop the spool in this bag, then start the machine as usual, and you will find that the cotton will run freely, without tangling or slipping.

Children's Clothing

CHILDREN'S clothes are always a problem for the mother who makes them at home. But even the baby may profit by the suggestions here given. For his or her imperial majesty a creeping frock may be made by attaching an extra piece of material, six inches, to the center back of any plain dress or slip. Attach by means of buttons and buttonholes. This band is adjusted after putting on the dress, which it keeps down over the underclothes and stockings while the baby is enjoying himself on the floor.

In sewing the vents of children's dresses, which usually receive the hardest wear, the continuous pleated is the best to use. This is a straight strip of material, cut on a lengthwise thread and sewed to the edges of the pleated in a straight seam. The seam is folded in the middle and the other edge is then hemmed in position. The band is turned back on the side of the pleated, overlapping the outside, as is to form a facing, on the under side it forms a small extension flap.

Mutton time is coming; look up your straps of velvet, plush or cloth to keep the children's hands warm in the winter. To secure a pattern, have the child place his hand on a piece of paper, fingers together and thumb out, and draw around it. Round out the upper edge, so as to allow plenty of room for the sections for each hand, and cut the wrist openings with silk tape

For Embroiderers

ONE reason why embroidered articles are not completed is that a woman gets a stamped piece and a lot of embroidery silk, takes them home, works on the piece for a time and then puts it aside for several days. Then when she is ready to take up the work again she has probably forgotten all about the scheme or arrangement of the colors. She may make a trip back to the store for the purpose of inspecting a sample finished piece, but only to find that the latter has been sold.

One very simple, inexpensive and practical way to overcome this is to make a card of the colors of the silk or muslin, as she buys the stamped article and the silk, to take the colors of corresponding colors and mark the different positions of the stamped pattern to correspond with the finished piece. Then is there no danger of forgetting the colors of the design she wishes to copy.

Sewing Machine Hint

IT is often difficult to sew any thin fabric, such as any of the modish velvets, materials, or silk or muslin, on the machine without puckering it. This can be avoided by placing a piece of tissue paper under the material and stitching through the material and the paper. When finished, the paper can easily be torn away, and you will find that your work is quite flat and smooth.

For the Economical

MOST of us who have none too full pocketbooks look with dread upon the making of new clothes with each fresh season. Here are a few ways of reducing the necessary cost: By cutting out the neck of a woman's shirtwaist in round, square or V-shape, you have a fine corset-cover. Cut off the sleeves of the waist for a peplum, and trim the cut edges with heading for wash-ribbon, and a valenciennes edge.

If the waist comes in the back, place a strip of insertion to conceal this, and make a new clasp in front by sewing on a facing cut from the skirt section of the shirtwaist. This last should be cut off at the waist line before the peplum is added.

To trim an inexpensive house dress, cut out fancy pattern outlines of solid-colored chambray and apply these patterns as edges and bandings on checked, plaid or striped ginghams. Fasten for these trimmings cut from paper, should be fastened by hand to the dress and then machine-stitched.

Sometimes you will pick up remnants of lace and embroidery, cut in all sizes to piece these, cover with knots and loops of antique or ornament braid to hide the joined parts.

Finally, one of these three hints will help to solve your problem.

Velvet Quills

ON MANY of the new hats this fall, instead of feather quills, are appearing formed simply of velvet, cut and stitched to the proper size and shape and fastened by a row of stitching down the middle to give the effect of the central vein. The quill is, of course, wired. The same idea can be worked out in satin also, and the whole can easily be duplicated by a clever woman with a turn for needlework. Strangely enough, many of the new feather toques, completely formed of feathers, are trimmed with these velvet quills. Surely a reversal of the usual conditions!

Shirtwaist Sleeves

DRESSES and shirtwaists always become soiled and worn out on the sleeves faster than anywhere else; moreover, separate black sleeves sell almost immediately any white waist they are worn with. A good idea is to make with each blouse a pair of extra sleeves, reaching a little above the elbows and fashioned of the same fabric and cut as the sleeves underneath. Fasten these with a band of bat rubber under a hem.

A Trio of Useful Hints

THE home dressmaker should, above all, keep up to date in her tools. There are so many time-savers that she can have at little cost. One of these is a pair of scissors which is fastened to the middle to give the effect of the central vein. The quill is, of course, wired. The same idea can be worked out in satin also, and the whole can easily be duplicated by a clever woman with a turn for needlework. Strangely enough, many of the new feather toques, completely formed of feathers, are trimmed with these velvet quills. Surely a reversal of the usual conditions!

A black silk waist which must stand hard across the shoulders and have two inches of wide lawn or batiste. These may be loosely tucked inside the waist and worn on alternate days.

To make a perfectly fitting extra belt on a one-piece dress cut a strip of silk about 1 1/2 inches wide and a little smaller than the waist measure. Turn in a narrow hem all the way around and carefully slip-stitch this. Fold the silk in half and stir this fold. Along it tack a piece of whalebone three inches long. Make a row of shirring each side of this row, each of these rows being 1/2 inch away from the whalebone. Then along these tack pieces of whalebone 2 1/2 inches long. Sew to the front edges of the whalebone three and four pieces of two-inch wide ribbon; use the ribbon through the loops and tie in a bow in front. A safety pin may be sewed on the inside across the lower edge of the waist so that the waist and skirt may be pinned together.

At the Grand.
Next Wednesday night will bring "Two Americans Abroad" to the Grand. It is described as a fanciful mixture of comedy, drama and delightful music, with gorgeous scenery, magnificent costumes and startling stage effects. It comes with the highest endorsement of the press of the large cities where it has played. The case is headed by the well known star Helene Reice. In securing the services of Miss Reice for the principal female role, the management found an ideal actress for a difficult part and affords Miss Reice the great opportunity possible for the exercise of her wonderful art. The balance of the cast contains well known names. The production is staged in the usual manner for which Harris shows are noted.

Field Coming.
The New Orleans Picayune says:
Al G. Field celebrated his silver anniversary in New Orleans by a triumph at the Crescent theatre last night, the large crowd which packed the theatre from the parquette to gallery being almost continuous in its applause of the efforts of the different members of the company with which Field has surrounded himself.

Norman Stanley is an interlocutor the like of which is very seldom found nowadays, and he carries the show through without a hitch, rising to all the jokes with capability and tact. He also possesses a very fine voice.

Field is coming soon to the Grand.
At the Sun Theatre.
The big noise for the first half will be the celebrated Gypsy Wayfarers, a big spectacular scenic

It seems fitting that Mme. Louise Homer, the American contralto who was so superb in last year's revival of Gluck's "Orfeo and Euridice" should figure prominently in the revival of the same composer's "Armide," which opens the season at the Metropolitan on Monday night.

It is one thing to see Mme. Homer on the stage in all the voluptuous beauty of Amneris in "Aida," as the evil old witch in "Hansel and Gretel," the the godlike Orfeo, and the weather-beaten Anacrusis, and quite another to see her as the Mme. Homer of everyday life, womanly, gracious, sympathetic and interested in many things that lie outside the sphere of a prima donna.

In her own drawing room, which is essentially a singer's salon, with big spaces through which a voice may ring unhampered by excessive singing feature consisting of six of the best singing voices that it was possible to assemble in an act of the same number of people. Now the Gypsy Wayfarers were here last season but the act is the same as if it had never been here at all. Owing to the fact that the people with possibly the exception of one or two are all new since the act was here last season.

The old singers having been replaced with higher class people, and it is said by those that have played the act this season that it is 100 per cent better than it was last year.

Norman B. Martin billed as the world's greatest xylophone soloist, has a fine act. His playing succeeds in pleasing everybody who hears him. His selections are mostly of a popular order, and he certainly knows how to handle his chosen instrument.

Lord and Meek, a pair of comedy burlesque producers of whirlwind comedy sketches are to be here with the funniest of them all, this big time act will cut a big swath in the comedy end of next week's bill.

The McNutts, cycle experts, better known as the Nutty McNutts, and their troupe of train-draperies and the listener may hear, undisturbed by petty bribe or frivolous decoration, Mme. Homer is a charming hostess who speaks of herself with commendable modesty and reluctance.

Her husband is Sidney Homer, the composer, who has been setting some of the Yeats poems. Mme. Homer speaks with enthusiasm of her husband's songs, and it is easy to see that she has inspired many of them and has helped him in his selection of those remarkable poems by modern writers in which he has been successful and which she sang for the MacDowell Club last year.

"Mr. Homer lets his songs get into print very slowly. I remember one in particular which I thought complete years ago, but he is not satisfied with it even now, and holds it back for further revision. It was written—let me see—six, no, seven years ago. Yes, it must be seven, because Louise was five years old at that time, and she is now twelve!"

It is a picturesque way for a prima donna to count time. Not by her debut or her many operatic triumphs does Mme. Homer reckon, but by more tender and womanly associations. Events in the Homer household date from the day when the twins were a year old, or when the second baby came. The general idea of prima donnas, who live to make advantageous marriages of a commercial sort, or who appraise belted curls in language more forcible than politeness, must be revised in the light of Mme. Homer's arithmetic.

At that moment the domestic local color is deepened by a glimpse through the portieres of the Homer man servant trundling a double baby carriage through the hall, that the Homer twins, the youngest of the singer's four children, may have their daily outing.

"The Star" owned by Henry Ruel and operated by him under the management of B. F. Howard. The little picture theater has been refitted throughout and all trace of the damaging conflagration which drove the Arcana out of business is covered up by new decorations, new chairs, piano and a lobby that has been entirely re-

Another excellent bill has been arranged for the first half of next week at the Majestic theater. Morrison and Parrott, in a dramatic comedy sketch, "A Pair of Lunatics" are scheduled as the headliners. They are hits of the slap-bang variety. Those novelty ladder dancers, Sweeney and Rooney, will be another feature of the bill. Their work has earned them an enviable reputation in the vaudeville world. Bert Ross, a Dutch comedian of class, will be one of the big lights. His act will be a hit with his own original parodies. The fourth act will be taken care of by Ellison and Ellison, a musical pair, who will play their ways into the hearts of local music lovers. New pictures will close the bill.

Opening of the New Star.
A big event in the current week of theatrical history will be the reopening of the theater in the Dice Building under the name of modeled. The lobby has been enlarged several feet and will be one of the prettiest in the city. The sidewalks are wainscoted in green burlap and surmounted by wall mirrors that give it a most attractive appearance. The ticket booth in the center of the lobby has also been remodeled. The interior of the house looks practically like another theater. The walls have been decorated beautifully. The stage has been enlarged and new colored trimmings added to the entire house.

A fine new picture machine, of the Powers make, one of the most expensive in the city, built by the same company as that employed at the new Columbia, was fitted out Friday and installed in the machine booth by the operator Will Heisel.

The staff of attaches are as follows: B. F. Howard, manager, and soloist; Miss Ballard, formerly with the Pastime, pianist; Will Heisel, electrician. No cashier has been chosen as yet.

The theatrical event of the week was the death of "Chantecler." It drew a crowd for 322 nights at Port Saint Martin theater, and outside of Paris in the various European countries there have been 500 performances of Rostand's drama. Taken in all, the total receipts were $800,000. The costs, however, were enormous, not only for the numerous touring companies, but for Paris as well, where the expensive feather costumes, and costly scenery were renewed six times. "Chantecler" was a success artistically and financially, but it by no means fulfilled the hopes of the author and directors. A new modern drama, "Adventurer," by Alfred Capus now holds the boards where "Chantecler" strutted so long.

The theater managers of New York must have been a trifle stung lately in distributing favors among the board of aldermen. The other night one of the aldermen introduced an ordinance which authorized the mayor to appoint a board of twenty-five commissioners who shall pass upon all the theatrical productions in the city and shall have the right to prohibit any public play or exhibition which, in their opinion, would have a tendency to corrupt the morals of youth. Her next engagement was with the Proctor Stock Company in New York, after which she played Liza with Maudie Adams at the Empire Theater in the original production of "Peter Pan." She then joined the second "Peter Pan" company on tour, playing seven different roles, including the title role. Her more recent engagements have been in "Cape Cod Folks," "The Honeymooners," "The Troubadour" at the Lyric Theater, "Down Broadway," during the run of this great musical revue at the Casino last summer.

Miss Goodwin is a native of Baltimore. When only fifteen years of age she went to Berlin to study grand opera, and remained there for three years working under such famous teachers as Graziani, Prof. Nickless Kemper and Julius Liebman of the Royal Opera House. While studying in Berlin she also sang at one of the largest temples. Her first engagement when she returned to this country was in "The Pit," at the Lyric theater. She did not appear in the play, but sang the operatic selections of the stage. She next sang the role in "The Fortune Teller" originated by Alice Nielsen. More recently she has been seen as Kato Armitage in "Three Twins" at the Herald Square theater and in "The Young Turk" Miss Goodwin is a dramatic soprano with a very high range and has a repertoire of many grand opera roles.

Does there happen to be a reporter in town who wants to swap jobs with an actor? Here's a chance for him if he does. Now stop that shoving. The line forms on this side.

Douglas Fairbanks, who plays the Chh, a particularly youthful, verdant reporter in the play Thomas Buchanan has written by that name, wants to be a real, honest-to-goodness reporter, and if the proper terms can be arranged he might be induced to trade his job. At any rate that is what Mr. Fairbanks says he would like to do and, proof to the contrary, he must be believed.

This isn't the first time that Mr. Fairbanks has acted the part of a

ANNA WHEATON AND MISS DORIS GOODWIN AS THE DAIRYMAIDS
IN "THE HONEYMOONERS"

New York, Nov. 19.—Anna Wheaton and Doris Goodwin, as the two dairymaids in "Madame Folks," "The Honeymooners," "The Troubadour" at the Lyric Theater, have scored such a joint success that their rendition of two comparatively minor roles has become one of the leading features of the production. Their pastoral duet and their trio with Van Rensselaer Wheeler are two musical numbers which never fail to call forth rounds of applause. They appear in peasant costume with wooden shoes and without stockings, and their dancing and acting is as distinctive as their singing.

Miss Wheaton is a granddaughter of John F. Wheaton, who was for three successive years Mayor of Savannah, Georgia. When twelve years old she made her debut with Margaret Anglin in "The Eternal Feminine." (Easy!—business of yawning here by the gentlemen of the press), swinging public opinion by the power of your pen (Also swinging Jack for a meal.)

"In getting the information which would aid me in my characterization of a reporter," went on Mr. Fairbanks, "I visited a number of newspaper offices, and really I could hardly resist the temptation to go and ask for a position. I had much rather have a copy boy come and ask me for my story than have the door boy come and tell me it's only five minutes before the curtain." (Only the curtain will wait, and the Fates protect you, Mr. Fairbanks, if you make that copy boy wait!)

Mr. Fairbanks gets "fired" in the play, but of course that never happens to a real reporter. There are lots of other things we could tell Mr. Fairbanks; but that would be giving away the secrets of the business.

Have Some Fun With Your Bird

FEAST ON THE BOARDS.
First Actor—Say, we hired the claque to work three extra encores on the third act.
Manager—What was the game?
"Why, we had turkey dinner in that act, and the extra calls gave us a chance to eat more."

ANCIENT AND MODERN.
New England item—I am descended from Plymouth Rock, a long time back. The Turk—I descended from the roast on, last night.

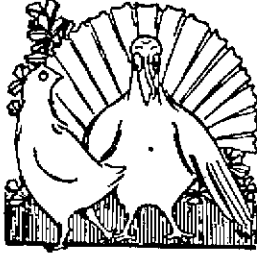

A MARTYR TO THE CAUSE.

PARTICULAR.
Young Wife—John, dear, are you fond of oysters on the shell?
"Yes, dearie, but don't stuff the turkey with the hulls, you know."

THE DAY IN DIXIE.
Uncle Ephraim (at the table)—I'll show do much paint on this Thanksgiving day! But, brass snail ole haw, when I's cyarvin' dat bird I'll mak' mah mouf watah wishin' it was possum.

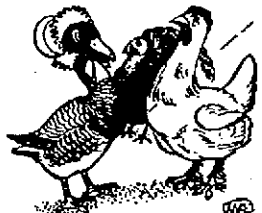

THE SHADOW BEFORE.
The gobbler spread himself and squeaked that he felt cold.
"They'll make it hot for you Thanksgiving," cackled the hen.

REALLY MEANT.
Cook—My, but you're the plump, fat one!
Turkey—Go 'way! You're stuffing me!

LIMITED THANKFULNESS.
Your gratitude men will remember With feelings of doubt and of fear If you're thankful one day in November And kicking the rest of the year.

"ARE YOU LOOKING FOR ME, LITTLE BOY?"

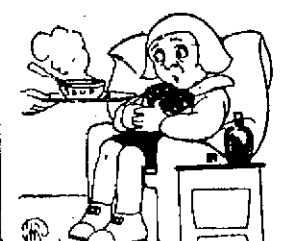

PRIDE GOETH BEFORE A FALL.
Mrs. Chick—That turkey bird is awfully swelled up.
Mrs. Goosey—Yes; he's got it so bad he is about to lose his head.

SOCIAL SLASHES.
Miss Gabbler—Miss Highbob says you're crazy.
Miss Culshaw—No wonder. When I met her on the avenue my head was turned.

HOW SHE WON HIM.
"What became of the Wilbur girl that Gawkins flirted with at the summer hotel?"
"You mean the girl he thought he flirted with? She married him."

THE DAY AFTER.
Nothing to hear but grunts; Nothing to do but sleep; Nothing to pick but bones; Nothing to eat but soup.

A GLOOMY OUTLOOK FOR PA.

"Who do you take after, Bertie—your pa or your ma?"
"Neither of 'em. Ma an' me takes together. Pa gits wet's left—if there is any left."

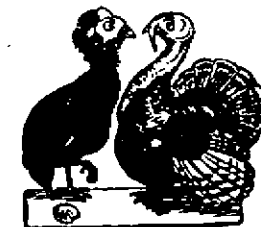

THANKS, AWFULLY.
Thankful for prosperity;
Thankful for a bed all night;
Thankful for the turkey feast;
Thankful for the appetite.

SHEER BRAVADO.
Thrice welcome, deadly mince-meat pie!
No other pie can beat you.
Although not yet prepared to die,
In spite of that I'll eat you!

JOY FOR THE BOY.
Thanksgiving is a dandy time.
I rush on, get a seat
At table when the turkey's on
And eat and eat and eat.

ANOTHER MASSACRE.
"Alas!" groaned the barnyard philosopher. "Now is the day when those boasting of belonging to a Christian nation again dismember turkey."

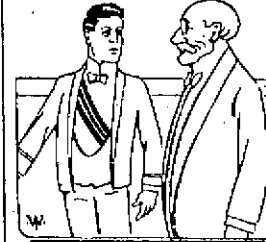

AVIATION OF THE GOBBLER.
The Guinea—The ostrich needn't plume itself. It is not up to date.
National Feed Bird—That's right. It ought to come around to the fowl yard the day before Thanksgiving and see the feathers fly.

ADMONITORY.
List, little Charlie, list!
Though perhaps 'tis wasting breath—
Thanksgiving does not consist
In stuffing yourself to death.

FIRST SUNDAY AFTER.
"Why does Thanksgiving come on Thursday?"
"To give the family a chance to dispose of the cold turkey so they can have something new for Sunday dinner."

THE PARSON'S HUNGRY DAY.
It was a turkey dinner, an' the parson asked a blessing.
Said he, "I like the turkey—all, an' don't despise the dressing!"
The way that turkey vanished was a caution to behold,
And many good old stories at the feast the parson told.

POINTING HER OUT.
First Nighter—Uh-huh, can you tell me where my wife is seated?
Second row on the first aisle, seven hats to the right."

AFTER THE FEED.
Friend, you may journey far or here or there;
All menus try, assay all bills of fare;
Dine with the Germans or the Eskimos,
And as a sybarite or gourmand pose,
But in the end you will return and say,
As I do now, at this chant royale's close,
"That sovereign bird of o's Thanksgiving day!"

CLEVER.
"He's a clever man."
"Not."
"Yes; he can carve a turkey without standing up to do it."

ALL STUFFED UP.
With all John Rockefeller's wealth
I'll bet that he
Ate less than half the turkey meat
I tucked in me.

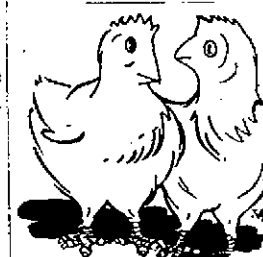

THE PESSIMIST.
"I've got a busy week ahead of me."
"What's the particular cause of this unusual activity?"
"I'm preparing for Thanksgiving day."
"Arranging a party, eh?"
"No."
"Sending out greetings?"
"No."
"What then?"
"Why, I'm trying to think of something for which I can be thankful."

GETTING A BRACER.
Johnny—Lawd, I lingered a long time on the bicep today, didn't I?
Dick—He knowed he had the turkey to carve, and he ain't very good at it.

ADVICE FROM A KILL JOY.
Oh, do not pay on turkey day
For some great spread,
But dine on humble hominy,
Beans and brown bread.

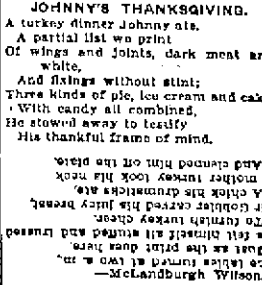

AN OLD SPORT.
Miss Leghorn—Tom Turk has got to be a rowdy.
Miss Plymouth Rock—That's only a stall. He thinks that if everybody calls him tough he'll be passed up at Thanksgiving.

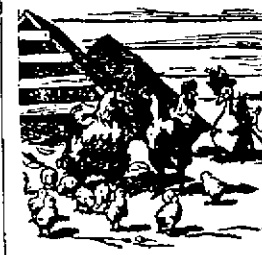

THE DAY WE FEED.
Thanksgiving day, Thanksgiving day,
We'll celebrate the same old way—
We'll eat and eat and all get gay,
But shall we ever think to pray?

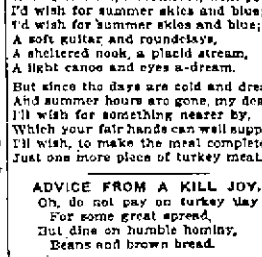

THE BARN DANCE.
Rooster (to Biddy)—Can I have the next dance with you?
Biddy (the hen)—Sorry to refuse you, but I am engaged for this set.

JOHNNY'S THANKSGIVING.
A turkey dinner Johnny ate.
A partial list we print
Of wings and joints, dark meat and white,
And fixings without stint:
Three kinds of pie, ice cream and cake,
With candy all combined,
He stowed away to lastify
His thankful frame of mind.

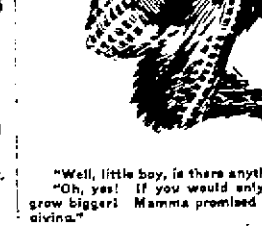

THE WISHBONE.
Were I to wish, sweetheart, with you,
I'd wish for summer skies and blue;
I'd wish for summer skies and blue;
A soft guitar and roundelay,
A sheltered nook, a placid stream,
A light canoe and eyes a-dream.
But since the days are cold and drear
And summer hours are gone, my dear,
I'll wish for something nearer by,
Which your fair hands can well supply:
I'll wish, to make the meal complete,
Just one more piece of turkey meat.

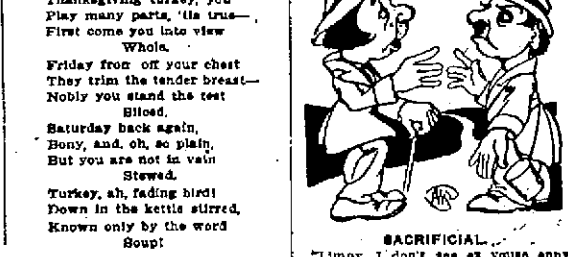

THE CONTINUOUS BIRD.
Thanksgiving turkey, you
Play many parts, 'tis true—
First come you into view
Whole.
Friday from off your chest
They trim the tender breast—
Nobly you stand the test
Bleed.
Saturday back again,
Bony, and, oh, so plain,
But you are not in vain
Stewed.
Turkey, ah, fading bird!
Down in the kettle stirred,
Known only by the word
Soup!

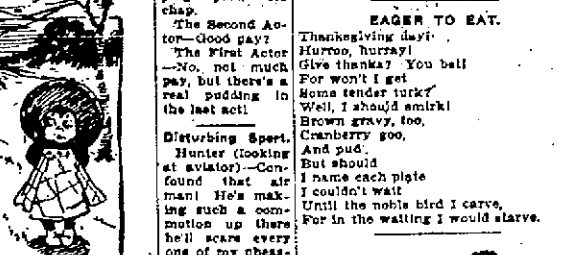

TEASING OLD GOBBLES.

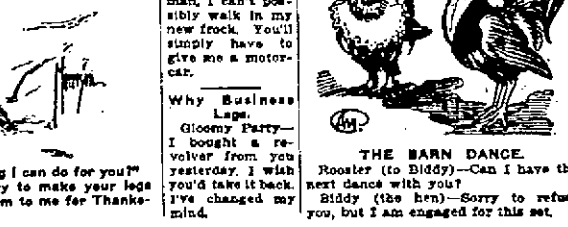

BARNYARD GOSSIP.

SACRIFICIAL.
"Limp, I don't see as you're any good to sashify."
"Say, Fussy, I think ov do mince pie an' cold turkey dat I'll store away in de next few days. Dat means less hull-jestin' fer udder fowls. See?"

EAGER TO EAT.
Thanksgiving day!
Hurray, hurray!
Give thanks! You bell
For won't I get
Some tender turk?
Well, I should amirkl
Brown gravy, too,
Cranberry goo,
And pud.
But should I
I name cake?
I couldn't wait
Until the noble bird I carve,
For in the waiting I would starve.

ARTHUR BANNON ON HIS ALASKAN TRIP

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.
(BY ARTHUR H. BANNON.)
The Fish.

Yes, there are mosquitoes in places, and they are usually on your face, and many black flies and buffalo gnats, "no see-ums," and others, and they all have habits which make for man's discomfort. I wore a net a great deal of the time to protect my face and gloves to protect my hands; but Jennings claimed that he was used to it and Blair said that if he could stand them in Montana, he could stand them there, for they were not nearly as bad in the Yukon as they were in Montana. I did not envy him his reason for feeling for Montana in this respect.

James Blair.
James Blair is an old Ohio boy from South Webster. He went to Montana in 1887, prospecting for gold and everything else, in order to get rich quick and finally settled down as a ranchman and guide for dude hunters. He has done well; has a fine ranch, a large herd of cattle and many horses. He is a true sportsman and a lover of game, and never kills any game for which he has no legitimate use.

The writer has hunted with him at different times in Montana and Idaho since 1896 and has found him perfect in his line of business. On this trip, however, he had his failings. He can ride a broncho and imitate a broncho master, but he admitted that he did not "savvy" the canoe. When it came to poling a canoe loaded with about eight hundred pounds of plunder, besides its load of human freight, up a swift stream, he was out of his line. One day in particular, he was trying to bring the canoe ashore out of some swift water and into an eddy and it was caught and whirled into the swift water in spite of all he could do. He was almost thrown overboard and, while Jennings and I volunteered to take a rope if he would throw it to us and help him ashore, he insisted on being allowed to "ride that broncho himself." He swore at it, threatened to rap it over the nose with a pike pole, and almost got drunk, and finally, after the current had carried him down the river about three hundred yards while Jennings and I laughed on the beach, he was forced to get out of the canoe into the cold water and, as he said, "take the brute by the nose and lead it into the corral."

He was game, however, as shown by his willingness to take the cold water. One day he took it by falling backwards off a slippery log. He went into deep water and, not being able to swim, he lost no time in catching hold of some driftwood and saving himself from further ducking. For Jennings and I it was to laugh. Blair is not opposed to immersion in water when the occasion requires, and at one time he bantered both of us to jump into the ice cold water and take a bath. We told him we had no objection to the cold water when it was necessary to take it externally, but that for simple bathing purposes we had no use for it on that trip.

Grant Jennings.
Grant Jennings, whose present postoffice address is Box 735, Dawson, Yukon Territory, Canada, is undoubtedly the best cook on the Yukon. He was recommended to the writer by the commissioner of the Territory, and everyone who knew him spoke of him in the highest terms. He is gentlemanly, industrious and understands his business perfectly. He came from Montana with the rush in 1897-98 and has been in the Territory ever since—his fortune rising and falling, according to the sale of prospectors. For the past five years he has owned and conducted a roadhouse at Stewart River on the stage line between Dawson and White Horse and he had the reputation of setting the best table on the route.

In managing a camp and taking care of himself and those entrusted to his care no one could do better. If he had any fault at all, it was the fault of working too hard; but he got fat on it, just the same. We all did, but we accumulated our flesh while we were homeward bound.

Fresh Water Fish.
The fishing on the Macmillan River is fine. Wherever you find an eddy, and there is one at every bend of the river, there the grayling are plentiful, and they all ways bite. They average about three-quarters of a pound in weight and they run from one foot to eighteen inches in length. They rarely go above a pound and a half in weight. The longest we caught was about sixteen inches in length. They take the fly like a trout, only with less hesitation. They are a scale fish and are better to eat than brook trout. The Indians told us that there were a few small trout at the very head water of the Macmillan, but we did not catch any. The lakes, of which there are many in the flats along the river and back from the river fifteen or twenty miles, are well stocked with lake trout, pike, and a species of fish which up there is called the "unknown." We did not fish in any of these lakes, because to do so properly we would have had to build a raft or a boat for the purpose, and it took all our time to do the hunting which we had planned. We know, from the tales told us, by some trappers on the outside, that it is quite a common thing to catch the pike and lake trout by trolling and this unknown fish with nets, in large quantities, and where they can get means of transportation, haul them down to Dawson and sell them. They bring high prices there in the winter. The grayling bring fifty cents a pound.

Salmon.
The Pacific coast salmon, including the coho, sock-eye and the king or spring salmon, dog salmon and hump back, all go up these rivers. They come from the Pacific ocean and, as it is seventeen hundred miles up the Yukon to Dawson and about six hundred miles from Dawson to our camp, salmon which we saw in the Macmillan had come about twenty-three hundred miles. According to their custom, they never feed after striking the fresh water. They have come into the fresh water to spawn and die, and after being there a short while they are not fit to eat. Most of them, at the distance we found them from the ocean, were almost dead. Many of their bodies had been beached; many that we saw were barely able to swim. These, of course, were easy prey to the bears. To be sure, some of the salmon survive the long trip in remarkably good condition and we secured a few in good old Scioto river style and took their photographs, just to show that we could. It seemed to the writer to be a great waste of excellent meat for all these salmon to die after they strike the fresh water, but none of them ever get back to the sea. The young salmon float down the river in the spring and make their way into the ocean, and when they are six years old they have reached a growth of from fifteen to forty pounds, and start back up the river again to spawn and die, according to their nature. These salmon force their way up the stream until the current becomes so swift that they can go no further. When they are fresh and strong, at the beginning of their trip, they go up rapidly and over some high falls; but the higher up they get the weaker they become and those that do not become a prey to the eagles and bears, and Indians and white men who are willing to eat them, simply die by wearing themselves out on the rocks and riffles among the canyons at the very headwaters of the streams.

On the southern shores of Alaska and in British Columbia the laws for their protection are strenuously enforced. No one is allowed to catch or kill a salmon after he leaves the salt water. The result is that at Ketchikan, othe Alaska coast, one of the great sights for tourists is to take a five minute walk from the steamer as it stands at the pier up to a small stream which flows through the town, and see the salmon packed there so closely that their backs stick out of the water. And many tourists, just for the sake of doing it, go down and catch some of these large salmon in their hands and then throw them back, to avoid a violation of the law.

The salmon catch on the Pacific slope this year was greater than it has been for many years, and the ships had all they could do to handle the cargo. Speaking of the enforcement of the law, the writer was making friends with the game warden as he came out on the steamer, and the warden stated that he had just received a salmon fisherman to dump his entire catch of two thousand salmon into the sea and lose them, for the reason that the boat on which they were carried had been held out to sea two days by a storm. Under the law, a salmon which has been dead more than twenty-four hours cannot be canned.

Small Game.
Besides the fish, there is fine grouse shooting—the ruffed grouse, blue grouse and spruce grouse being quite plentiful. We shot them when we wanted them for camp meat, but that was seldom.

One fine flock of spruce grouse which I remember in particular stayed near one of our camps on the river for three or four days, and a particularly well-feathered old cock bird always came up about breakfast time and strutted about within a few yards of us. I chased him up a tree one day and then climbed up in a neighboring tree to take his photograph. I drove him around until he lit on the tent, but I could never get the light just right and so I never got his picture. He was there when we left and I hope he is there yet.

Habits of Bears and Wolves.
Besides the grouse around our camp, we had many visitors. Three wolves passed our boat and our tent one night while we were asleep. This brought them within ten yards of us. We saw their tracks in the sand and followed their trail down the bar the next morning and saw where they had stopped to play within one hundred yards of our camp. We had no wolf trap, but we put out a bait of meat and set a trap gun, using my automatic. We fixed the automatic so that if the wolf took hold of the bait the gun would shoot five times in rapid succession; but nothing came to the bait. A wolf seldom travels in daylight, but does his prowling at night.

One morning we saw the tracks of an immense grizzly bear within a few yards of our tent and saw where he had sat down on the sand and evidently studied the situation awhile and then went up to our boat and left the print of his muddy paw on it, but being satisfied with the situation and not desiring to disturb us, he walked back down the river. We followed his trail until we found where he crossed the river.

I might add that it is a very common thing for a bear to follow a man's trail through the woods and keep just out of his sight. It is a well known fact that if you have a trail from one camp to another and use it, for instance, once or twice a day, you will nearly always find that there has been a bear on the trail every time after you have used it. Whether or not it is curiosity or a desire to enjoy the easy walking themselves is not known, but men frequently meet them under such circumstances and then some one has to give the right of way. If the man has a gun, the bear is the sufferer; if not, the man generally takes a tree, if he can find one in time. If he can not, then I do not know what happens.

Selkirk.
We arrived at Selkirk at noon of the twenty-sixth. I telegraphed home that I was still on earth, and coming home. Steamboats pass this point, going up the river at intervals of from three to five days. As luck would have it, one was due that night. I bought some cheap lumber from a member of the North West Mounted Police stationed at this point and Blair hired a carpenter by trade, and Jennings soon had crates built for our trophies and hides. I was given the job of keeping the Malamute dogs, which belong to the Siwash Indians, away from the trophies; and I would have been unsuccessful, for the Indians would not help or call off their own dogs, but they did not object to my clubbing them or throwing stones at them all I pleased. But as there were about one hundred dogs, all of large size, I soon grew tired of that, but remembered a rubber sling which I had carried on this trip to shoot at grouse and ptarmigan, and I got it out of my war bag and soon had those dogs howling "enough."

In spite of the frosty weather, there was some kind of a villainous gnat flying around to torment human beings, and before the day was over I was bitten twice, both bites resulting in large swellings. Blair had one eye practically shut and the side of his face all out of proportion, from their bites. They were the worst of the kind I ever saw. The buffalo gnats, mosquitoes and "no see-ums" were nothing compared to them.

We cooked our supper on the beach, traded the moose skin boat to some Siwash squaws for some moosehairs, which Jennings took, gave Jennings the surplus grub, tent, camp outfit, etc., and packed it in the canoe. He slept in the canoe that night, for he expected to float down to Dawson, a distance of one hundred and eighty miles, in the next three days.

Our River Steamer Ride.
We hailed the steambot with an improvised lantern, and were taken on board about 11 o'clock. The boat had accommodations for about one hundred and thirty passengers, and there were about three hundred and sixty on board. We had to take what is called "standee accommodations"; that is, sleep on a canvas shelf about two feet wide and six feet long, set up on the boiler deck. There were more than two hundred people in the same condition, mostly prospectors in the "sourdough" class, but many weak-bearded "Cheechakos." I have used these words just for the sake of explaining their meaning. A "sourdough" is a prospector who has spent the winter on the inside. A "cheechako" is a tender foot who has never wintered inside.

The steambot company furnished a single blanket for a bed, but as nearly everyone on board had their own bed, and Blair and I had ours, there was no shortage in that respect. The crowd had to be fed at four different sittings in the dining room. It took three hours and a half for each meal.

We secured permission from the first officer to spread our bear skins and trophies out on the upper deck to dry, as they were but poorly cured. This attracted the passengers to them, and our big bear skin created considerable comment. Showing that this bear is considered a large bear in that country, a Mr. Jeffers, whose name appears as one of the game wardens of the Yukon Territory, gave the writer the skull of what he considered to be the largest bear which he had ever seen. It was to be sent to a Mr. Sheldon, who had been in that country a few years before, collecting specimens for the Smithsonian Institute at Washington. I have the skull now, and it is one-half inch shorter in length and one-half inch narrower in width than the skull of the big bear which we had killed. So that, while our bear may not be the biggest bear, and probably is not, which has come out of that country, yet it is considered a fair specimen.

White Horse Again.
We arrived at White Horse at midnight of the twenty-ninth. The train left next morning at nine-thirty and all of our stuff had to be re-packed and re-boxed, for the Customs officer had to go through it and inspect it and issue our permits. There were about six different documents, in the form of manifests, certificates, permits, etc., attached to each bill of lading which accompanied our freight. Besides this, we had to square accounts with our banker, re-pack our personal baggage, get our mail, settle up some accounts, buy our tickets, engage our steamer berths, etc. We got this all done before nine-thirty and caught the train. It was lucky we did, for when we arrived at Skagway at four-thirty that night we found that the first steamer left at nine o'clock and the next one not for five days after. The same crowd of prospectors flooded the boat, but we were not caught napping. I had telegraphed ahead and engaged a stateroom. When we thought everything was ready for the ship to pull out so far as we were concerned, we concluded to investigate and see if our freight had been transferred from the train to the steamer, and of course it had not. We then had to hunt up the Customs officer and the freight agent of the White Pass & Yukon Railway and get them to come down town and open up their offices after supper, things they did not like to do, but which they finally did. The Customs officer had to break the seal of a car and the freight agent had to re-bill our stuff. With the aid of a sailor, Blair and I rolled our freight out of the freight car, through the ware rooms and custom house and onto the steamer and, for the first time, we breathed easy.

We had been sleeping so near the boiler and engine on the steambot that we were short of rest, and when we got on this steamer, with a nice, quiet berth, we slept like babies; but we caught cold just the same. It was the history of most of the passengers. They were all accustomed to outdoor life, under much more strenuous conditions, but they nearly all caught cold on the steamer. We were not seasick, although we missed a meal or two to avoid being sick. More than half of the passengers were sick.

The trip to Seattle was a most delightful one, although it rained all the way. That is not unusual in South Eastern Alaska, for we learned that the weather was the usual weather at that time of the year and that it was raining for the thirty-ninth consecutive day. The steamer was delayed about two days in gathering up its cargo of salmon, and landed us in Seattle, on October fifth.

At Ketchikan Mrs. Daniel Nelson, formerly Miss Edith Jones of Portsmouth, came on board the steamer. She had gone to Alaska several years ago as a government teacher of the Haida Indians and had been there ever since. She is now located at Kasau and is the only white woman on that beach. She was going to Seattle to meet her husband who had spent the summer in surveying in the Iditarod territory where the most recent gold strike had been made. Home coming is the most pleasurable part of every successful vacation, and after leaving Blair at Seattle to make a bargain with a taxidermist for mounting our specimens, I took the Union Pacific route home, and enjoyed the wonderful scenery through the Selkirk and Rockies for which this route is so famous.

You retire at night on the sleeping car traveling among towering snow clad peaks and through the overhanging canyons of the Rockies in a temperature at freezing point and awake next morning out on the wide plains on the provinces of Alberta with the sun shining hot and the dust rolling up from the track in clouds. Heat and dust for the first time for more than three months, but you are going back home and personal inconveniences amount to nothing now. The physical discomfort of a long railroad journey is a joke, for when you cannot do anything else you can eat of the many good fresh vegetables which you have been missing for you have an appetite like the "Digger Indian" who eats anything he can bite. Try it. It is cheap at the price. I am going again some time.

THE END.

Father Died In Huntington

Ed Sparks, a John street plumber, was called to Huntington Friday night, by the death of his aged father, who has been very ill for some time past.

Has Moved Family.

J. I. Bladen, who was recently appointed division passenger agent of the N. & W. railway with headquarters in Cincinnati, has moved his family to that city from Roanoke, Va.

Is Enjoying Bannon Story

No one in the city is enjoying the Times' serial story of Attorney A. H. Bannon's Alaskan hunt more than S. B. Adams, the local N. & W. agent. Mr. Adams has traveled all through British Columbia to within 400 miles of Mr. Bannon's hunting grounds and the story is of particular interest to him. He himself hopes to some day visit Alaska.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

For the benefit of our friends and customers and former patrons who are unable to come during the week we will be open on Sundays until after the holidays.
